New Ferry Route Set, Says Davis

Transport Minister Jack Davies said Monday one major new ferry route supplemented by feeder services to smaller communities will be the basis of the new B.C. Ferries service to the north and mid-coast.

Davis said he wanted to reassure residents of the areas that the government is planning services to all communities, not just those with major ferry docks, and also that the ferries will be used for some freight services, such as transporting perishable food.

He said he fears residents are developing unnecessary worries, based on misunderstanding about the government's plans for the service.

Directors of the B.C. Ferries Corp. met today to work out details of the new service and to decide on rate reductions on some ferry runs, reductions already promised by Premier Bill Bennett.

Funds for the rate reductions and the costs of the new service will come from an $8-million federal subsidy. In return, B.C. agreed to take responsibility for ferry services to northern and mid-coast communities.

Davis said the new major ferry route will probably run from Tsawwassen, south of Vancouver to Prince Rupert or Kitimat.

It will use a large ferry, probably one currently in the ferries fleet, and will stop only at ports with suitable docks — Kelsey Bay and Ocean Falls at the moment.

Davis said he hopes a stop at Bella Bella will be added almost immediately and one at Port Hardy by the time the northern Vancouver Island highway to that town is completed.

The major ferry will carry passengers and the same sort of freight that now is carried on other B.C. ferries, he said. That freight must be driven directly on and off the ferry and must not require loading or unloading with cranes or similar equipment.

Davis said the government does not plan to use the new service to carry freight in the same way Northland Navigation carried it. (Northland received a $3.1 million federal subsidy for supplying transport services to the area until 1976).

Davis said Northland carried goods such as tons of newsprint and for the government to subsidize that sort of service would be to subsidize exports and big corporations.

The most innovative part of the new service will be the feeder services, he said. These will be small ferries able to dock alongside floats or on beaches to serve communities that do not have good docking facilities.

He said service to the Queen Charlotte Islands is the biggest problem right now and is still being considered.

The government hopes to receive more federal funding to help in dock construction, he said.

Meanwhile, Ken Stratford, ferries traffic manager, said improved service for Sunshine Coast communities northwest of Vancouver will begin in late May.

He said the new triangle runs will be serviced primarily by new ferry Queen of New Westminster, which replaces two vessels previously serving the area. The Queen of Nanaimo and the Queen of Burnaby will provide support service as required.

Stratford said that the new service is designed to provide improved service during summer months.

FUMES FOIL OIL CAP BID

STAVANGER, Norway (UPI) — U.S. troubleshooters boarded an offshore platform in the North Sea today to try to cap a runaway well gushing 4,000 tons of oil a day, but leaking gas fumes forced them to leave the rig.

Angsar (Boots) Hansen and Richard Hatterberg of the Red Adair Fires and Blowout Co. of Houston arrived on the rig at 7 a.m. as 45-mile-an-hour winds and high seas abated but within hours, the leaking gas forced evacuation.

AIB Cracks Down On Overpayments

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Anti-Inflation Board is adopting a firmer stand on recovery of salary increases paid in excess of the guidelines without the board's approval.

Employers who have been notified to recover excess payments will be required to submit a recovery plan to the board within 30 days of such notification.

Where employers do not submit an acceptable recovery plan within the established time limits the board will refer the case to the administrator for appropriate action. He can impose fines or jail terms or both.

The board will take the same step where in the opinion of the board significant recovery action has not taken place.

Under the AIB rules increases in compensation above arithmetic guidelines may be accepted by the board where "special consideration" applies.

The board, a year ago, cautioned employers that in cases of wage agreements exceeding the guidelines they should make interim compensation payments only to the extent permissible under the guidelines until a formal decision had been issued by tre AIB.

The Canadian Labor Congress, meanwhile, is confident that federal wage and price controls will be lifted within "one or two months," CLC vice-president Julien Major said Monday.

Visiting Quebec City to attend a convention of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers, Major told a reporter the two-million-member CLC received assurances at a meeting with government and business representatives in Ottawa last Friday the controls would come off soon.

He did not elaborate on the nature of the assurances, but said the labor congress has reached general agreement with big business on the nature of the post-controls economy.

Tipplers Plug B.C. Courts

An elaborate computer system used by British Columbia attorney-general's department has persuaded government officials to step up advertising aimed at drinking drivers.

Justice Information Systems came up with the statistic that a whopping 40 per cent of all B.C. criminal court cases involve impaired driving charges.

Deputy attorney-general Dave Vickers is ebullient about the system, calling it "the most important management and budget tool we've got."

Apart from the drinking-driver percentage, the system is proving a tremendous aid in an overhaul of B.C.'s entire court setup and has prompted a move toward dropping most unresolved summary conviction charges after 180 days.

Vickers is intrigued by the system's ability to show the nature of crime — "what crimes are being committed in what percentages in what communities."

"What you have for the first time is a co-ordinated justice system," he said. "This elaborate management information system will make justice procedure more effective and, let's face it, less costly. To put money in the front end in prevention is a lot cheaper than putting it in the back end."

NEWS BRIEFS

Pop Recovered

EDMONTON (CP) — With the temperature at 30 degrees Monday, thieves made off with 2,550 cases of pop worth about $10,000. But police later said the pop had been recovered and a man has been charged with theft. (See Alberta heat wave story on page 40.)

Restraint Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top executives of the Plumbers, Pipefitters and Steamfitters Union and an employers' group, the Mechanical Contractors Association of Canada, have joined in calling for restraint and longer contracts in negotiations. (See story on page 6.)

Hydro Taps Europe

B.C. Hydro plans to raise $75 million through the issue of bonds on the European market, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Monday. He said the issue is being offered for the first time in Europe because of the advantageous rates. (See story on page 17.)

$2.2M Tunnel Theft

BOGOTA (Reuter) — The equivalent of $2.2 million was stolen from a bank in southern Colombia during the weekend, the biggest robbery in the country's history, police said Monday. They said the robbers dug a tunnel into the Banco de la Republica in the town of Pasto — near the Ecuadorian border — from a coffee shop 45 yards away.

Oil Export Surplus

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The seven Arab oil-exporting countries and Iran together will have an estimated trade surplus of $52 billion this year, less than two per cent more than last year's surplus, a report in the journal Mideast Markets says.

Ferries Corp. Sued

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. government and the B.C. Ferries Corp. are being sued over a collision between the Queen of Victoria and a fishing vessel in Active Pass last September. The damage action was filed in B.C. Supreme Court on Monday by the owner of the ship, the 197-ton Afognak, and the Kodiak Fishing Co. of Kodiak, Alaska.

Buildings Corp. Cuts 800 B.C. Gov't Jobs

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

About 800 people now employed by the ministry of public works will be looking for new jobs in the public service before the B.C. Buildings Corp. is set up early next year.

Highways and Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said today about 1,200 public works employees will be transferred to the newly-created crown corporation, but about 800 employees, from "janitors to architects" will not be absorbed by the corporation.

None of the 800 will be laid off, Fraser said, and attempts will be made to retrain and relocate them in other government ministries.

The minister said the greater efficiency expected of the corporation is the reason for the excess employees. Some of the jobs now done by those civil servants will be performed by the private sector when the corporation is set up.

The BCBC was established by legislation passed in June, 1976, but Fraser said he does not expect it to be in operation until January, 1978, at the earliest.

The retraining of the 800 employees for other positions will start shortly, Fraser said, although he added the 800 have not yet been told their jobs are being eliminated.

The corporation, which will be headquartered in Victoria, will manage all government space requirements, about 17 million square feet of space — except for the legislative buildings, Government House and several small operations.

A joint union-management committee will be set up to oversee the transition and transfer of public works employees, Fraser said.

"Our sole aim is to deal in a fair and reasonable manner

Ottawa Reins In Crown Agencies

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Treasury Board President Robert Andras announced Monday two major steps to restore control over government spending.

He announced that a chief financial officer, a comptroller general of Canada, will be appointed and that the government will impose new restraint on the financial freedoc of Crown corporations.

The announcement was a response to Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell, who complained in his last annual report that: "Financial management and control of the majority of Crown corporations is virtually non-existent . . . and Parliament has lost or is losing effective control of the public purse."

Andras noted that creation of the comptroller-general position meets the principal recommendation of the auditor-general's 1976 annual report.

He said the comptroller-general would have deputy minister status and would report directly to the president of the treasury board.

In general terms, he would be responsible for the quality and integrity of the financial administrative responsibilities and practices in use throughout the federal public service.

The government will also reduce the financial independence of Crown corporations, Andras said.

The government was serious about correcting abuses in its financial administration system, Andras said.

The moves were hailed by opposition spokesmen, al- Conservative treasury board though Don Mazankowski, the critic, said he detected suggestions of inroads on the auditor-general's powers.

The proposed legislation will give the auditor-general the authority to say whether the government is getting value for its money, Andras said.

MAPLE BAY HOTEL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Overnight fires destroyed the Maple Bay Inn near Duncan, and Betty's Store, 14 miles south of Campbell River.

Occupants of the hotel got out safely but a fireman cut his wrist and had to be taken to hospital for treatment.

Both fires are under investigation and no estimates of damage have been released.

The fire in the Maple Bay Inn was spotted at 1:53 a.m. and within minutes the old building, a local landmark, was engulfed in flames.

Duncan RCMP said there were six persons living in the Inn at the time, owners Bert and Diane Hough, and tenants Brian Parker and Bill and Catherine Reed and their son Derek.

All escaped without injury.

The fire at Betty's Store, near Oyster River, broke out at 11 p.m. and swiftly consumed the store and a small trailer parked nearby.

The Campbell River fire department sent men and equipment even though the fire was outside their fire district.

DUTCH BUSINESSMAN GOT POLYSAR $3M—CBC

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC says it has learned that a wealthy Amsterdam businessman received $3 million of the almost $5 million in kickbacks paid by Polysar International, an agency controlled by the federal government.

The money was paid between 1970 and 1976, the CBC says.

It says the person who received the money is the man behind a company which bought latex from Polysar to make foam-rubber carpet backing.

His purchases were so large that he was offered a volume rebate and following his instructions, Polysar made the payments to a Swiss bank, the CBC says.

It says the man denies he was the customer involved and that he says the company never dealt with Polysar. A variety of sources, however, confirm that the man was a major Polysar customer, the CBC says.

Hockey Answers Demanded by MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Hockey Canada bosses Alan Eagleson and Doug Fisher should be called on to explain Team Canada 77s embarrassing performance at the World Cup, Northern Ontario MP Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) said in the Commons Monday.

Peters introduced a motion saying a Commons committee should be told why the country sent "second-rate players instead of the best of the NHL" to the World Cup.

Canada was trounced 11-1 by the Soviet Union Sunday. It lost to Sweden and barely defeated the United States.

Eagleson, a Toronto lawyer, is the head of Team Canada while Fisher, an Ottawa political columnist, is the chairman of Hockey Canada, the federally-funded agency that looks after international hockey relations.

Peters' motion did not receive the unanimous consent required for it to come to a vote.

Later, he asked whether the government had plans to train a team specifically for international competition. Industry Minister Jean Chretien, acting prime minister, said he knew of no such program.

The prime minister's office said Trudeau was ill and worked at home Monday.

Chretien suggested in the Commons exchange that if the World Cup tournament were held in the autumn rather than during the Stanley Cup playoffs in the spring, Canada would have better players competing in Europe.

But Peters was not impressed.

"We take what's left over and send them over to Europe without having any training together as a team," he said outside the Commons. "It's unfair to the players and unfair to Canadians."

"We don't have to win, but we do have to learn to lose more gracefully than we do now," he said.

"We have to teach them some sportsmanship, which sometimes is sadly lacking in the National Hockey League."

New Motor Hailed as 'Billion-Dollar Breakthrough'

By BILL RICHARDS
Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Working out of a backyard laboratory a California inventor has developed a new design for the standard electric motor that officials here Monday said could save massive amounts of energy.

In an unusual joint news conference, California energy officials and officials of the Southern California Edison Co., the fourth largest U.S. utility, hailed the motor design as "a major billion-dollar breakthrough for energy conservation."

The invention, called a "controlled torque motor," reduces electrical consumption by as much as 20 per cent while producing the same power output as conventional electric motors, according to its developer C. L. Wanlass.

Noting that about 64 per cent of U.S. electricity goes to run electric motors, Wanlass said his new design could "make a significant impact in energy consumption in a relatively short time."

The new motor design could be used to replace anything from a tiny motor in an electric shaver to a massive industrial motor, officials said. One utility official calculated that, if the device became widely used among just residential electricity consumers alone in the Southern California Edison system, it would save about one billion kilowatt hours of electricity in a decade, or enough power to run a city of 300,000 people for a year.

The officials said electricity savings would be considerably greater.

According to Wanlass, if a half billion electric motors were converted to his design, the U.S. could save between one and two million barrels of oil a day, or roughly the daily production expected from the whole Prudhoe Bay Alaskan oil field.

Modification of existing electric motors could be modified for about $40 for a one-horsepower motor while the design could be incorporated in new motors without increasing current production costs, Wanlass said.

Wanlass, 51, was formerly director of the Philco Corp.'s electronic research laboratories and holds a patent on about 40 inventions, most of them in the computer field. He said he developed the controlled torque motor design in a laboratory in the backyard of his Santa Ana, Calif., home after leaving Philco in 1965.

Southern California Edison officials said they tested the device after Wanlass came to them last year. Under laboratory conditions the new design saved up to 20 per cent of the electricity needed to run an ordinary motor, utility officials said. Larger energy savings could be anticipated in motors used under normal work conditions the officials said.

'Killer' Game Allowed In

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Revenue Minister Monique Begin said Monday that she is powerless to stop the importation into Canada of an electronic midway game giving points to drivers who run down simulated pedestrians.

Begin stated that she could only keep the controversial game—"Death Race"—out of Canada if it contained pornography.

Gordon Towers (PC—Red Deer) noted in the Commons that the Canada Safety Council is concerned about the uncontrolled importation of the game into this country and asked if the government is considering measures to prohibit its entry. He said the government should act before the summer exhibition and fair season arrives and it begins to appear in midways.

Towers said the object of the coin-operated game is for the "driver" to kill as many simulated pedestrians—called "gremlins"—as possible in 60 seconds. Players are rewarded with a recorded scream every time they hit one of the pedestrians.

The minister said that no amendment is being made to the Customs Tariff Act to keep the game out of the country. "I have checked the precise wording of the section of the act which prohibits the importation of pornography," she said. "Violence is mentioned but only, I am sorry to say, as an element which accompanies pornography," she added.

Begin said that the current legislation also gives her no powers to prohibit the entry of hate literature—another class of imports which people have complained to her about.

The minister stated that she would support moves to change the regulations to give her powers to act against importation of hate literature and the "Death Race" game, but added that no change is being considered at present.

Begin said she will consult with Consumer Affairs Minister Anthony Abott and suggest that Canadian consumers be warned about the possible effects of the game.

Towers said outside the House that psychologists in the United States where the game is manufactured, are concerned that the game may have dangerous effects on some drivers.

He stated that the federal transport department is concerned about the importation of the "Death Race" but cannot act because it is not used on Canadian roads.

Motor Hailed As Major Energy Saver

"California energy officials were particularly enthusiastic about the propspect that the Wanlass motor could cut electricity use in home appliances. "We're hoping from this day onward the word Wanlass will be on the lips of a lot of people and it will benefit those people," said Robert Batinovich, president of the California Public Utilities Commission.

Another state energy official, Richard Maullin, said the results of tests on the Wanlass motor have been turned over to the federal energy and the energy research and development administrations.

Maullin said the new motor design may enable consumers to cut down on electricity use in home appliances, something President Jimmy Carter called for in his energy message to Congress last week.

According to Wanlass the redesigned motor uses additional copper winding and capacitors. The design achieves more efficient transfer of energy into the motor while cutting down on energy loss by 25 to 50 per cent.

"It's not an obvious design," he said. "If you were to do it from scratch it looks like a dumb thing to do."

800 to Need New Jobs

with all employees who are affected as a result of the establishment oof the new crown corporation," he said.

As an example of jobs currently performed by civil servants that will be done by the private sector under BCBC, Fraser said two Terrace public works employees now travel to Prince Rupert to repair government buildings.

There is no reason, he said, why that job shouldn't be contracted in Prince Rupert.

The new crown corporation will avoid building its own buildings for government use, Fraser said, and will rely on the private sector for space requirements.

He said the private sector is not in good financial shape and Victoria has about 400,000 square feet of vacant office space and Vancouver isn't much better.

"I see no problem in getting economic space from the private sector."

Fraser said the aim of BCBC is to end the waste of space brought about by NDP policies. "Under the previous administration, there were some horrendous stories of thousands of square feet of office accommodation lying vacant for months and months on end," Fraser said.

Before the corporation can operate, Fraser said, amending legislation must be passed to the Act. The Act now allows only cabinet ministers and public servants to sit on the board of directors, and Fraser said that will be amended so representatives of the private sector can sit on the board.

"We want to be able to take advantage of the expertise in the private sector," he said.

Current public works deputy minister George Giles will assist in the transition of public works functions to BCBC and then will transfer to the ministry of recreation and conservation where it is believed he will be put in charge of the program that manages the legislative precinct.

Crew Kills 2 Hijackers

LONDON (Reuter) — The crew of an Ethiopian Airlines DC-3 killed two hijackers on Monday, Addis Ababa radio said in a report monitored here. It described the men as members of the Eritrean Liberation Front, which is fighting a guerrilla war against the Ethiopian government. The men ordered the pilot to fly them to Saudi Arabia and then to Khartoum, Sudan. They were killed after a struggle and the plane landed safely at Addis Ababa.

Land Deal Allegations To Be Probed by RCMP

The allegations, by a loosely-knit group here, implicate Mayor Harold Moffat and developer Stewart Wood.

Both Moffat and Wood have denied the allegations, subject of a current seven-party series on British Columbia Television, a CTV affiliate.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's office in Victoria says the office received an anonymous 12-page letter from Prince George, alleging municipal wrong-doing and criminal activity in land sales.

The spakesman says that even though the charges are anonymous, "they are serious enough to warrant an investigation."

"It is obvious allegations are being made," the spokesman said. "The matter has received wide public interest and we can't just sweep the charges under the carpet."

He said the municipal affairs ministry will probably wait to see the results of the RCMP investigation before deciding whether to launch its own check.

"If the allegations are just a question of disgruntlement over the decision-making of city council, then it becomes a local matter," he said.

Wood has said the allegations come from a secret society of jealous land developers and realtors.

A spokesman for the group objected to the term secret society, but said that members don't want their identities revealed. He did say that up to 25 persons have attended meetings of the group.

The group consists of "all the people who have been shafted by the mayor and who have united to fight Moffatt," the spokesman said.

6 Mills Charged With Pollution

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — The U.S. government filed complaints Monday against six western Washington pulp mills, charging them with violating the federal Water Pollution Control Act.

The civil complaints were filed by United States attorney J. Ronald Sim on recommendations from the environmental protection agency.

The complaints involved mills operated by Crown Zellerbach at Port Angeles and Port Townsend; Boise Cascade at Steilacoom; mills operated by ITT Rayonier at Port Angeles and Scott Paper Co. at Everett; and a mill operated by Georgia Pacific at Bellingham.

Sim said the complaints seek to penalize the mills for the economic advantage they have gained through delays in pollution clean-up.

"Delay has given the six mills an unfair economic advantage over the owners and workers at mills that have sought more diligently to obey the law," Sim said. "Moreover, these mills continue to save substantial amounts of money daily by foregoing water pollution control expenditures."

Donald P. Dubois, EPA northwest regional administrator, said the mills knew what they had to do "but just didn't do it.

the weather

Temperatures were unseasonably warm in the B.C. interior on Monday with record readings for the month at a number of locations, including Kamloops and Quesnel with 31 degrees, the Canadian high. Prince George followed closely with 30 degrees. A Pacific disturbance gave rain along the coast overnight. It will be accompanied by cooler temperatures and showers or possible thundershowers as it crosses the interior today. A few showers will persist along the north coast. A ridge of high pressure will give clearing as it crosses the coast tonight and moves into the interior on Wednesday.

Old Crow Not Part of Canada, Charged Trapper Claims

VANCOUVER (CP) — A muskrat trapper from Old Crow, Yukon, charged with violating territorial game laws says he plans to fight the case on grounds that his end of the Yukon is not part of Canada.

Bill Smith, 56, is a white man who came to Old Crow 11 years ago, married Tabitha Kikavichik of the Yuntut Kutchin band and has taken up the Indians' aboriginal land claims.

He hunts, traps and fishes, living off the land in much the same fashion as his wife's people have for generations.

Equipped with a few dog-eared law books on court procedures, Smith has succeeded in tying the federal court of Canada up in judicial knots, peppering court registries with injunction applications, motions, appeals, writs, affidavits and statements of claim.

Court officials concede that despite Smith's lack of legal training, his mastery of court procedures verges on genius.

His court file here weighs five pounds. He has about 20 actions underway in Vancouver and Ottawa, all of them aimed at getting the supreme court of Canada to rule on aboriginal title in the northern Yukon.

Basically, he has been trying to stop construction of the Dempster Highway between Dawson City and Fort Macpherson, NWT, because it would cross traditional Old Crow trapping grounds.

Smith was charged April 1 with violating Yukon game regulations by unlawfully offering for sale a grizzly bear pelt.

Crown prosecutor Paul O'Brien said in an interview from Dawson City Monday he did not know if the case was deliberately triggered by Smith to force a test case on aboriginal rights because he did not know the circumstances in which the charge was laid.

Smith said he and his wife plan to fight the case on constitutional grounds: That the Canadian government has no jurisdiction over the Old Crow area because the land was never properly surrendered to Canada by Britain.

Smith believes the Yuntut people are in law an independent people inhabiting an independent land — all of the Yukon north of the 67th parallel.

If the principles of aboriginal title established in recent decisions of the Supreme Court — particularly its ruling in British Columbia's Nishga case—are applied to Old Crow, the Yuntut Kutchin have a clear right of possession to the area, Smith said.

He said the band has never surrendered to anyone, probably because nobody ever bothered to ask them, and as a consequence, the Yuntut Kutchin never signed any treaties.

Cautious Carter, Hussein Meeting

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter opened two days of talks with King Hussein of Jordan on a cautious note Monday, declaring "it would be a mistake to be too optimistic" about the chances for major strides this year toward an Arab-Israeli peace.

In the latest in a series of intensive meetings with Middle East leaders, Carter appeared to be tailoring his remarks to his guest's well-advertised caution.

In toasts at a "working dinner" at the White House Monday night, however, Carter warned that unless progress toward peace comes this year "it may be a long time in the future before such an effort can be made again."

Hussein, responding, promised "I will do all I can so that future generations can enjoy a better life."

Hussein and Carter scheduled their third talk today in a series of meetings deliberately low-key and sombre.

Carter told dinner guests Monday that he and Hussein have "had a very fruitful discussion about past history and the future. We recognize the difficulty of resolving animosities that have existed for so long."

Carter repeated what he has said to both Arab and Israeli leaders: that 1977 "can be propitious for peace."

White House officials said there was no discussion during Monday's initial meeting of the CIA payments to Hussein which were disclosed Feb. 18.

Hussein did not deny that Jordan had received funds for its counter-espionage operations from U.S. intelligence but declared it was "an attempt at character assassination" to suggest the money went to his own pocket rather than the public purse.

Two-Price System Urged for Drinks

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A two-price system for liquor — one price in places with entertainment and a lower price in places without — was one of proposals recommended by directors of the British Columbia Hotel Association at their mid-year meeting Monday.

Association president Frank Burger of the Kings Hotel, Victoria, said a two-pricing system for taverns with entertainment could be imposed as a matter of administration rather than legislation.

Burger said owners should be able to choose the price for drinks, depending on the expense of the entertainment engaged.

"If someone wants to put on an extremely high-riced band, he should be able to charge enough to cover his expenses," said Burger. "If he charges too much the people just won't come."

The 36 delegates to the one-day meeting instructed committees to prepare reports on this and other topics for their national convention at the Hotel Vancouver in October.

One such report will come from the insurance committee, which was asked to come up with a new insurance plan for the member hotels.

"Nearly all insurance premiums have doubled" in the past year and some are up 500 per cent," said Burger.

"There's one Kootenay hotel whose premiums went from $7,000 to $27,000. To many hotels, insurance is not available at any price."

The association's public relations committee will prepare a brief to the federal government on why hotel food in B.C. costs more than in the United States.

"The cost of food in the first place is extremely high," Burger said. "and then we have the labor factors — our wage rates are much higher."

He said the average wage for a hotel employee in the U.S. is between $2 and $2.50 an hour whereas the same jobs under union contracts in B.C. get paid $5.

Burger added that the association would like to hold discussions with hotel employees' unions this year when they are not negotiating and "when they are not in a state of confrontation over dollars and cents."

Also to be presented at the October convention is a draft of a new constitution.

Burger said the directors wanted a constitution that would better reflect the different sizes of hotels from different geographical areas represented in the association.

The association president said he was pleased the provincial government has instituted new liquor legislation on sale of wine and hard liquor but added that the association would like some instrucion on how new laws are to be implemented.

Burger also said hotels should be able to buy their own switchboard equipment rather than be forced to buy the equipment offered by B.C. Tel.

He said the association discussed the brief it recently presented to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission opposing the telephone company's proposed 15-per-cent increase in business rates and 49-per-cent hike in trunk line rates to hotels with switchboards.

LOW, INSIDE BALLS FAN FIREMEN

PORT-AU-PRINCE (UPI) — Firemen battling a blaze Monday at one of the world's largest baseball factories slipped and scrambled over floors covered with thousands of rolling baseballs, officials said.

The fire destroyed the three-storey building housing Tomar Industries of Haiti, which makes thousands of Rawlings baseballs and softballs each day, and threw 600 persons out of work. Two persons suffered minor injuries.

Damage was estimated at $500,000.

Zaire Troops Push Near Angola Border

KOLWEZI (UPI) — Combined Zairean-Moroccan forces are pushing toward the Angolan border after capturing the rebel-held town of Mutshatsha in a surprise predawn raid.

The capture of Mutshatsha, operational headquarters of the Zairean army until it fell to the rebel invaders March 28, was a major victory for President Mobutu Sese Seko, who was expected to make a triumphant entry into the town today.

Government forces marched 19 miles during the night and attacked the town in what a military spokesman said was a total surprise to the rebels.

"There was some opposition ,but it was too easy," the spokesman said. Most of the rebels fled without a fight and several were captured, he added.

In an interview with the Zairean national news agency AZAP, Mobutu refused to say whether Zairean troops would pursue the rebels across the Angolan frontier.

The paramount thing now was the "territorial integrity of Zaire," he said.

The Soviet Union and Angolan leaders say the Zairean forces, backed by aid from France and the United States, plan to continue their initiative into Angola.

Mobutu later flew to the province capital of Lubumbashi, the former Elisabethville, where he was greeted by tens of thousands of cheering citizens.

In the north, government forces were reported ready to storm Kapanga, another important rebel-held town, 205 miles northwest of Mutshatsha and 47 miles from Angola.

Eight American Methodist missionaries are being held under house arrest there.

Ethiopia Expels West Reporters

Times News Services

ADDIS ABABA — The Ethiopian military government announced Monday the expulsion of the three remaining resident Western correspondents in the country and ordered them to leave within 48 hours.

The measure, the latest in a series taken against the United States and Western organizations, affects Jeremy Toye of Reuters, Laurent Chenard of Agence France-Presse and David Ottaway of The Washington Post.

A Ministry of Information spokesman said the measure expelling the three Western correspondents was being taken not only against the individuals named, but also the organizations they work for. Later he said the question of whether the agencies and the newspaper also were being expelled had not yet been settled.

The government statement said that the three, the only resident Western correspondents in Ethiopia, "have been distorting out of all proportions events in Ethiopia in general and the progress of the ongoing revolution of the broad masses in particular."

The government said that the three correspondents "have been giving very little attention to official government statements and have often relied on hearsay, rumors and fabricated propaganda material of counter-revolutionary elements."

At the U.S. Army post exchange there was some trouble early Monday as a crowd of about 1,000 people, mostly children, tried to storm the wire fence and break into the store, where goods shipped from the United States, including fresh vegetables and milk, are sold to American officials living here.

Ethiopian military police were called in and dispersed the crowd by firing rifle shots in the air. They remained on guard afterwards to keep all Ethiopians off the premises and to allow the more valuable merchandise — such as radios, hi-fi's, and refrigerators — to be packed for evacuation along with the Americans.

Underground Housing Given Spur

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A University of Minnesota group is using a $53,870 grant from the Minnesota energy agency to design a manual to assist people in planning energy-independent underground housing.

The group is working from a simple premise: As you dig deeper into the ground, the temperature becomes more and more stable until, at a depth of 25 feet, the temerature in Minnesota is 55 degrees (13 celsius) year-round.

"We're not talking about a little hole in the ground with no windows that you climb down a pole to get to," he explained.

He said he envisions a house flooded with daylight from skylights, atriums, sunken courtyards or windows peering from a hillside.

He estimates the cost of construction at slightly less than that for a similar above-ground frame house.

Sterling noted that the particular land configuration at a given site makes it impossible to come up with a single set of plans that will work anywhere.

But he said the group's research will result in a general manual that will prove helpful to most people.

Computers will be used to solve some of the intricate problems, such as the amount of earth to put on the roof. Earth one foot deep weighs 100 pounds a square foot. Thus, the more earth on the roof, the greater the cost of shoring it up.

Steling said a lightweight layer of insulation covered with a thin layer of earth may prove to be more economical and efficient than earth alone.

Other problems the group will deal with are how to insure adequate air circulation and how to prevent condensation.

The group hopes to develop an underground house that needs no outside fuel except a small amount of electricity for lighting and cooking.

Reduced heating requirements could be met with a wood stove, small solar collectors or a system of windows designed to collect maximum sunlight in combination with insulated shutters to prevent heat loss at night.

The university is one of the nation's major centres of research on underground buildings. A large testing room currently is being dug out of sandstone 100 feet below a practice field near Memorial Stadium.

Matter of Survival

The mere announcement of undisclosed ferry fare cuts by Premier Bill Bennett was enough to set off triumphal jubilation in Victoria tourist business circles. Without any details whatsoever, it's difficult to say much about the move. But local businessmen are instinctively right in their reactions.

Any cut is a psychological boost to the tourist industry on Vancouver Island. Like the world "sale" in a department store bargain basement, just the fact of a reduction in fares—any reduction—will regenerate old business.

The Monday morning analysis, however, shows that the fare cuts will probably be not much more than symbolic. The premier said they will be financed out of the $8 million federal ferry subsidy handed over last week to B.C. Since some of that is to be reserved for a new ferry service in the mid-coast region of the province, the amount available for fare cuts on the busy southern routes is only a portion of the total. Perhaps a cut of 10 per cent, at most, will be made.

Still, any reduction is welcome for the fact of the government recognizing its mistake of 1976, when it doubled the fares and ignored all subsequent protests. Vancouver Islanders won't gloat or say I told you so, but to see this government of gimlet-eyed accountants backtrack and acknowledge its rash error is satisfying indeed.

There is still considerable puzzlement over just how the $8 million pie is going to be cut up, and what the subsidy will pay for. All the public relations razzle dazzle that accompanied the subsidy's announcement last week just temporarily covered up a major split between Ottawa's and Victoria's interpretations. As written, the federal-provincial agreement is elastic enough to stretch over any subsequent decisions.

In retrospect, what seems to have happened is that Ottawa agreed to hand over an annual subsidy for B.C. Ferries in return for being completely absolved of any further responsibility for the expensive and politically unproductive problem of north coast freight transport.

Until last fall, Ottawa provided a subsidy for freight carried by Northland Navigation Ltd. of Vancouver to the numerous isolated small ports of the upper coast. In 1976 that totalled $4 million. Supposedly, half of the $8 million subsidy Ottawa is giving B.C. is accounted for thereby, but that depends on whom you're talking to—Otto Lang or Bill Bennett.

B.C.'s premier says firmly that the $8 million is to be used only to subsidize people, not freight (about as meaningful and informative as a previous party slogan, saying you're going to do something for people, not to them). Otto Lang left the impression—publicly, at least—that he wanted the money applied partly to the north coast's transport problems.

Transport Minister Jack Davis only talks jargon about a "roll-on, roll-off" ferry for the upper coast of B.C., which description implies dock and terminal facilities that only a couple of communities could provide.

It looks like the upper coastal communities are about to be submerged in the torrent of doubletalk. Lask week the natural reaction of southern Vancouver Islanders to the subsidy announcement was: "Good, now the ferry fares will be reduced and tourist business will pick up."

On second thought, we should be just as concerned for the survival of the upper coast's economy as for our own. Whatever happens to the ferries connecting the Island with B.C. mainland, we shall survive, simply by fact of sheer numbers—more than 300,000 people live on Vancouver Island. Increased ferry fares damage the Island's economy, but we carry on.

On the upper coast, lack of a dependable subsidized ferry service will mean ruin. Already, residents of some coastal communities whose only practical supply line is the Pacific Ocean have been hit with food price increases of 50 and 75 per cent. The inferior stopgap tug and barge service that stepped in after Northland Navigation ceased operation raised its rates last month and indicated more increases were on the way.

It seems that the provincial government is going to put the problem in an either-or equation, that either the southern B.C. Ferries routes be subsidized or the upper coast, but not both. This is unfair and dishonest. Having agreed to assume responsibility for a freight service from the federal government to get $8 million a year subsidy for B.C. Ferries, the provincial government cannot now turn around and disown the upper coast.

It is unfair and dishonest, we repeat. Part of the $8 million subsidy from Ottawa—and whatever other cash it takes from the provincial treasury—should be applied to ensure that the upper coast is not effectively cut off and abandoned. The premier might start looking for money in the human resources minister's nest egg of $100 million; if the upper coast can't qualify for "welfare" then this is indeed a hardhearted administration.

A Popgun Law

Like any compromise the new gun control bill tabled in the House of Commons by Justice Minister Ron Basford will satisfy neither the proponents of strict firearm controls or those who think there should be no changes whatsoever in current controls. For all its timidity, though, the bill will make it more difficult for people to acquire firearms. Gun buyers will be required to get a firearms acquisition certificate. This will ensure a police check of their past and provide a cooling off period for those who might kill themselves or others in a moment of emotion.

The police would also be able to seize guns from current owners who threaten to misuse them and prevent these people from purchasing another gun. Provincial attorneys-general would also be able to request hunter safety and competence tests before issuing a five-year certificate at a cost of $10. Selling or lending guns to persons without the required certificate or providing firearms to persons of unsound mind through mental disease or impairment could bring a five-year prison term. Those who use guns in the commission of a crime would be subject to longer sentences as well.

Perhaps the largest discrepancy in the new bill as compared with the old is that it won't require three million gun owners to acquire certificates needed to buy new guns. Basford explains that in a free society the majority should not oppress the minority. This patently silly logic is meaningless in terms of a gun control bill. Anyone wishing to purchase a firearm now will be required to get a certificate, but three million Canadians who own 10.2 million guns needn't worry. In other words, more than 10 million guns are floating around the country, owned by any number of people who might become unstable even for a moment, and subject to no control whatsoever. Viewed in these terms the new bill punishes potential gun owners, while it allows millions of Canadians who possess firearms to carry on uninhibited. Not only is this patently unfair to new gun owners, it makes the bill next to useless.

Faced with a powerful gun lobby, the government backed down from its old and more stringent bill that would have required registration of all gun owners. About the only thing that remains constant in the new bill is that hard-pressed police forces will still be faced with mountains of paperwork judging from estimated annual gun purchase figures. Each year Canadians purchase about 260,000 firearms. "If people want better laws relating to guns, they had damn well better speak up right now and be heard," Basford said. While the new law is slightly better than nothing, we can only lament that the justice minister didn't give the gun lobby the same tough talk he now hands out to the public.

'Understanding' Quebec

"Nous benissons ton nom pour toutes les graces que nous recevons de ta main, et pour ce grand pays que nous partageons ensemble.

"Blessed be God who brings forth bread out of the earth, and has given us this great country to dwell in together."

Those words, uttered in flat tones by Martin Goodman, editor-in-chief of The Toronto Star, signalled the beginning last week of the annual dinner of The Canadian Press, Canada's national news-gathering agency.

The bilingual blessing was appropriate. At the business sessions preceding the banquet a great deal of time has been spent discussing Quebec and the inportance of seeing that news from that province is reported adequately and objectively, so that the rest of Canada will "understand" their French-speaking brethren.

Spoke to Many

During the debates I wondered if I was being flippant in being reminded so vividly of discussions which began 20 years or so ago about Youth. Remember? We discovered Youth, we realized they had to do their thing, that if they were in a mess it was all our fault. We wrote volumes about them in an effort to "understand" them. The more we wrote about them the more of a problem they became. Whatever happened to them, by the way?

In an effort to be serious, I talked with many editors and publishers who attended the meetings of The Canadian Press and the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association. These are people who are supposed to have their fingers on the pulse of public opinion.

I spoke to westerners, plainsmen, Ontarians, Quebecois and maritimers. "How do people in your part of Canada feel about Quebec and the possibility of separation?" I would ask.

A New Brunswick publisher: "A lot of English-speaking Canadians are pretty mad, especially in the civil service. We have a lot of French speakers in our population so the bilingualism requirements are high. It's pretty tough for a man who's third generation New Brunswick to be told that if he doesn't learn French, and wants to get on, he'd better move to Calgary or some place. But hell, we'll work these things out."

A Quebec publisher (French language), tapping the maple leaf emblem in his button hole: "I wear this so the bastards (Parti Quebecois) will know that I'm Canadian. Levesque's a crazy man." Another: "If you want to know what's happening in Quebec, read Mein Kampf." A Montreal editor: "The English are only just now trying to understand us and it is too late."

An executive of a Montreal newspaper (English): "Levesque wants power, complete and absolute power and he will go to any lengths to get it, even if it means inciting the mobs to violence."

A southern Ontario publisher: "The people in my part of the world are quite determined about one thing: Canada will continue as one country. Their forebears put a lot of blood and sweat into making it so and if they have to they'll fight to keep it that way."

An Alberta publisher: "We want one Canada and I think we'll get it. Right now people in Alberta see this as a private feud between Trudeau and Levesque. The rest of the country doesn't have much say in it."

A Toronto newspaper executive who was listening: "Right. Levesque should be talking to the premiers of the other provinces and not to Trudeau. He knows where the weak spot is and he's going after it."

If there was a common thread in the observations it was an intense suspicion of Prime Minister Trudeau. Few had a good word for him. Measures introduced by his government were blamed for creating much of today's friction. "And now he's turning around and trying to blame us for it," grumbled a western editor.

You'll have to puzzle it out for yourself, as I tried to. I thought I was doing pretty well, too. I wondered if there is room for optimism, if the people of Canada know more about Canadianism that the demagogues and exhibitionists who keep haranguing them.

Must be Crazy!

So we came to the night of the dinner. I would have shouted a loud amen to Martin Goodman's grace but I had a lump in my throat. I thought that was why other people were silent.

"Blessed be God who brings forth bread out of the earth, and has given us his great country to dwell in together."

There was a rustling and scraping as several hundred chairs were pulled ut and the guests attacked their shrimp cocktails. But what was this? The three Toronto ladies who with their husbands had permitted me to share their table were fiercely atwitter.

"For goodness sake! What does Marty think he's doing? This in Ontario. He didn't have to start the grace in French. He must be crazy!"

Oh ladies, you collapsed my house of cards. Can it be that I am just a solitary dreamer? Or are there amy more out there like me?

Monarchists

I should like to point out to fellow citizens that Victoria has an active branch of the Monarchist League of Canada. There are sister branches of this organization right across Canada. Our own branch here is a flourishing one, and we are always glad to welcome new supporters.

The main purpose of the league is to give loyal support to the concept of monarchist democracy, expressed in one's personal regard for the reigning monarch. In this year of Queen Elizabeth's silver jubilee what better means could one find for showing loyal affection than by joining the Monarchist League?

At the present time, when the fabric of our country is under great strain, there is no influence more unifying than that of the crown. Monarchy is a spiritual mystery which stands above and remote from party politics but to which even the humblest citizen may appeal for justice.

Our local group holds monthly meetings at which noted speakers discuss topics related to the history and ideals of our nation. Some recent subjects have been: The Restoration of Canterbury Cathedral, The Role of the Crown in the Constitution, and Queen and Commoner — Joe Boyle, King of the Klondike.

The annual dues for membership are $5 or $2.50 for senior citizens or students. If you are interested please contact the local chairman, Miss M. Ingram, phone 592-2890. — Mrs. B. P. Allard, 2-919 Vancouver Street.

Redundant

Re Pat Dufour's story on the Hoegh Merchant that "the ship is crowded by 25, including two women stewardesses", I wonder what other kinds of stewardesses there are? — J. A. McCormick, 2-1912 Duchess Street.

Community Action Group helps the less fortunate of Victorians.

Eradicate Poverty

I would like to suggest that it is not Maxine Charlesworth, but rather Robert Parsons who sees the world through rose-colored glasses. It is in fact obvious that he does not even remove them when he reads the newspapers: otherwise he would have noted in the Times April 18 (Gastown's Ousted Derelicts Fight Back) that in downtown Vancouver alone, 8,000 "down-and-outers" must exist on $160 a month, living in rundown hotels and rooming houses and often paying as much as $150 rent per month, because these hotels are not covered by provincial rent controls. No, they are not all "rubbies beyond rehabilitation." It seems that many of them are injured or diseased from working in B.C. resource industries. And even if they could work, where is the opportunity with our unemployment rate of approximately 10 per cent?

Mr. Vander Zalm has a surplus of $100 million, but at what a price! Hardly a week goes by without some cut in social assistance. In today's Times (April 19) we learn that our minister of human resources personally intervened to cut off the funding of the Victoria Community Action Group. This means more jobs lost, less help for the unfortunate, and of course the silencing of another voice representing the poor. I would suggest that "Swamper Levi" may have made mistakes but at least he took his job seriously. He was concerned for the under-privileged whereas Mr. Vander Zalm seems more concerned for the welfare of the "well-to-do."

Call it Fabian socialism, call it Christianity, call it what you will, but the millionaires and those of us who are just comfortably off owe it to our society to try to eradicate poverty. No one should be asked to live below the poverty line. Could you Mr. Parsons live with "dignity and the feeling of self-worth" (his words) on $160 a month? — Audrey J. Fawcett, 57 Wellington Avenue.

Thickhead Gov't.

For the first time in 25 years Phil Gaglardi of the old Social Credit party spoke some sense when he stated that B.C. is unkind to visitors. How true this is in some cases. I once heard a very well-to-do restaurant man state that tourist time was the time to raise prices on meals. He was a millionaire and at the time his wife was in politics. But, as Gaglardi stated, millions of dollars come from tourists and the ferry rates have definitely hurt. But try to get this into this thickheaded government of ours.

What I can't understand is why Bennett keeps people like McCarthy and Davis in these positions. They sure don't know their jobs and with public reaction as it is you would think Bennett would do something. Davis never was bright even when he was a Liberal. As for Grace McCarthy, she would be better at growing flowers rather than trying to tell motel operators to get out and sell their product. My idea of this thing is that Billy boy and his bureaucratic friends have made a lot of mistakes but don't want to admit it, and it's the same now with recalling the cabinet. How much holiday hoes he want?

Fair Play

The two principal arguments being voiced against proposed government support for independent schools seems to be that the taxpayer should not have to underwrite the costs of sending some people's kids to a school that duplicates the public school system, and that the public purse should not be made to subsidize schoolsthat only the children of the rich can attend.

Both the above arguments are unreasonable.

The independent schools in B.C. save the taxpayer millions of dollars every year and have done for generations. It costs about $1540 a year (in Saanich) to send a child to public school. Every child not sent to a government school saves the taxpayer that amount. If the approximately 23,000 students now attending independent schools in B.C. were suddenly transferred to the public sector, it would cost the people of B.C. more than $35 million to educate them for one year and would probably necessitate the construction of several new schools in Victoria and Vancouver.

The wealthy send their children to both public and private schools. To contend that only the wealthy can send their offspring to independent schools is incorrect. I personally know many families who sacrifice a good deal to send their children to a school that they feel offers a more appropriate education. Frills and holidays are dispensed with, the new car is forgotten, mother goes to work; a single parent often pays 25 per cent of his or her net salary in school fees. Many schools fully aware of the difficulty some parents face, have offered bursaries, grants and occasional fee reductions in order to permit students to attend.

No one has yet to deny that the established independent schools of this province offer a high standard of academic training.

Dr. McGeer now proposes to give the schools the slice of the pie to which they have long been entitled. As a public school teacher, I applaud him for his ability to live up to his election promises, for his sense of fair play and for his guts. — Chris Harker, 4557 Montford Crescent.

'We are More than Soldiers, We Are Brothers'

By RICHARD GOTT
Manchester Guardian

The Bolivian colonel is in full flood as we come into the classroom. "How can you expect illiterate peasants to limit their families when rich people who ought to know better have lots of children?" A Mexican colonel interrupts him. "But look at the size of the slums around our cities. We have to do something. It may be necessary evil." The instructor, an Ecuadorean officer, intervenes from the back of the room. "But how can we interfere with the family, the basic unit of our society."

These aspiring students of political economy are attending the School of the Americas, the famous military college run by the United States Army at Fort Gulick in the Canal Zone for the purpose of training the armies of Latin America. In the past 27 years, since it was founded in 1949, 33,534 Latin-American soldiers have passed through its doors. Some have become presidents, many have risen to be commander-in-chief.

On one wall, among the medals and escutcheons of the armed forces of the continent, there is a framed letter from General Pinochet, dated November 6, 1973. In it, he expresses his personal thanks and that of the Chilean army for the work of the school. And in the entrance hall, on the scrolls of honor, the names are recorded of two Chilean officers who graduated cum laude in 1974 after a course in 'urban counter-insurgency."

Fort Gulick lies at the north end of the Canal Zone not far from the town of Colon. It overlooks the Gatun Lakes, the vast stretch of artificial water traversed by the Panama Canal. The damp and the tropical heat is oppressive, but inside the school, built in the old colonial style with high galleries, wide hallway and mosquito netting, the climate is just about bearable. Outside there is 80 square miles of training ground, much of it virgin forest.

The officers in the classroom, we are told, are merely taking a course in economics — part of their General Staff training. They stay in the Canal Zone for 10 months. Receiving similar training to that given to United States officers at the staff college at Fort Leavenworth.

PINOCHET
. . . prize pupil

There are a wide number of other courses, particularly of a technical character, and normally there are about 1500 students a year. The advantage of Fort Gulick is that the courses (since 1956) have been given in Spanish; and special attention is given to the particular problems of Latin America.

One such problem is urban guerrilla warfare, which has become such a characteristic feature of Latin American societies in the past decade. The Americans themselves recognise that they have had little historical or practical experience of this phenomenon, and the course given for a number of years at the School of the Americas was to some extent a co-operative effort. Latin-American students were invited to discuss the way in which their own countries had tried to deal with the problem, and they pooled their information.

According to Captain Chalmers, the personable young Vietnam veteran charged with coping with the impertinent questions of foreign journalist — and who speaks perfect Spanish — "No country is agreed on the tactics for coping with urban insurgency." But he agrees that "the course was very popular."

Last year, however, it came to a premature end. Appalled by the tide of military regimes in Latin America, and by the growing and widespread use of torture, the Democrat Congressman for Massachusetts, Michael Harrington, succeeded in halting the teaching of police methods in U.S. military schools.

Under the "Harrington Amendment," the School of the Americas found that it could no longer legally continue to offer its urban counter-insurgency course. In telling us this, Captail Chalmers could hardly hide his disgruntlement. "In virtually all countries soldiers have a pllice role," he explained with icy patience, "and we taught them things like how to control the traffic."

He has little time for Congressman Harrington — "He has his own ideas but his countrymen don't understand them" — and points out that it was the politicans, not the soldiers that lost the Vietnam war. He also explains that the Harrington Amendment has not really put a stop to police training. For those Latin-American armies who wish to send their military police to be trained in U.S. methods, "there exists schools in the United States itself."

Nevertheless it is obvious from a glance at the catalogue of courses offered at the School of the Americas that the five-month course for military intelligence officers, which includes "interrogation techniques" and "urban and rural counter-insurgency concepts," is designed to bypass the requirements of the Harrington Amendment.

But the writing is on the wall. The establishment of the school and a dozen other military bases in the Zone is wholly illegal and Panama is now urging that they be removed. Under the treaty of 1902 which governs relations between the United States and Panama, the United States is permitted "to defend" the Canal, but this hardly covers the huge military complex of the U.S. Southern Command which the Panamanian leader, General Omar Torrijos, has described as "this great colonial encampment."

The brotherhood of Latin-American soldiery, fostered at the School of the Americas, has certainly played a significant part in the United States colonial-style control of the continent. "Here," says Captail Chalmers, "we are more than soldiers, we are brothers. We all have the same problems. Everyone has the freedom to speak openly. The Latin-Americans have grown to feel that the value of this school is that it is the only place where people can meet and discuss without fighting. Indeed sometimes our former students have solved problems over the telephone."

The apparent result has been impressive. With the exception of the 1969 war between Honduras and El Salvador, Latin-American States (which have plenty of border conflicts and historical tensions between them) have not gone to war with each other during the existence of the school.

On the other hand, it is not being too harsh to claim that these same armies, which are so reluctant to fight each other, have been engaged during the same period in a virtually ceaseless war of repression against their own peoples. And the existence of the school has not prevented United States military intervention.

Captain Chalmers is unworried by the militaristic trend throughout the continent. "Historically the governments of Latin America have been military," he claims. "Perhaps it serves the interests of their peoples."

TORRIJOS
. . . bad enough

He points out that the armies in Latin America are the only institutions that are well organized. "Perhaps we are helping to organize them well, but if they extend that into the political sphere, that's their affair."

He admits to no anxiety about General Pinochet, such a distinguished former pupil. "We have relations between the school and military leaders if they've been here. They have money to send officers here and they take an interest in the school."

Those 30,000 Latin-American officers who have passed through its portals are now spread round the continent. During nearly 30 years they have imbibed United States' ideology and military methodology. But is it really in the United States' interests to continue to train Latin-American officers now that they are so visibly in charge?

Captain Chalmers certainly thinks so. He stands for the military professional who prides himself on his non-political attitude. "We would train Cubans if our government asked us to do so," he says.

But far away from the Canal Zone attitudes are changing. Can the Latin-American officer be guaranteed to remain in the American camp? Some graduates of the School of the Americas, after all, joined the guerrillas. The exception might become the rule.

Once real war is on the agenda again, the little band of brothers in the Canal Zone will not prove to be of much use.

Trudeau's Unity: History, Justice Give Way to Expediency

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

ALLAN, Sask. — It would be hard to conceive of two more different events.

Last Monday evening, on his first visit to the Prairies since the fall of 1975, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau went to a posh hotel in Winnipeg to talk to the Canadian Association of Broadcasters — and a national radio and television audience — about the subject that is foremost in his mind national unity.

Twenty hours before, Mr. Trudeau was in tiny Allan, Sask., talking to an overflow crowd of about 500 people and finding out what is foremost in their minds.

No, it isn't national unity. In fairness, the townspeople and farmers are concerned — as was evidenced by their applause when Mr. Trudeau answered the only question on the subject raised during the two-hour town hall meeting. What was on their minds? Mundane, perhaps, but urgent issues such as the Crowsnest Pass freight rates, the user-pay approach to transportation, the export price of wheat, beef imports, the cost of farm equipment and farm incomes in general.

The people of Allan didn't learn much that they didn't already know, but, then, neither did the broadcasters in Winnipeg. The Winnipeg speech — a leaden text read to a wooden audience — fell dismally short of its advanced billing. Its substance, however, demands close and critical examination.

The prime minister seems to be embarking on a risky game when, eureka, he discovers a silver lining in that black cloud hanging over Confederation — the November 15 election of a separatist government in Quebec. Mr. Trudeau would have us believe that November 15 was a blessing in disguise for the West and all other regions of Canada. "The Quebec election has opened the door more widely to change. It has created an opportunity ... This challenge to unity is the West's opportunity, the West's chance, to get a better deal out of Confederation. As it is for all Canadians."

The PM makes a point in Saskatoon

Is it not dangerous, is it not creating impossible expectations, to tell the West that, because the Parti Quebecois is in power, everyone now can get more out of Confederation? The pie is only so large and if some are to be served bigger slices, surely others will have to settle for smaller ones.

Unless, of course, the federal govenment is prepared to surrender a significant portion of its own large slice, through the decentralization of political and economic power. But there was no indication of that in Mr. Trudeau's speech. His posture was defensive. There was no indication that he really comprehends the phenomenon known as western alienation.

There were other points in the Winnipeg speech which deserve scrutiny. Mr. Trudeau is trying to resell the Official Languages Act by indulging in a little semantic sleight of-hand. "Bilingualism" now is "language equality". That's fine, except that the change in nomenclature disguises a real shift of emphasis. The dream that the day might come when Canadians across the country would, of their own free will, want to be conversant in both official languages has been set aside. As the prime minister described it, "language equality", far from encouraging bilingualism, would foster unilingualism. "our policy will help make it possible for the vast majority of Canadians not to have to speak a second official language more often — and never to have to speak a second language at all, if that is their wish."

Unilingualism for Quebec under Rene Levesque. Unilingualism for English Canada under Pierre Trudeau. All in the name of "language equality."

Equally disturbing is the way the prime minister seemed in Winnipeg to try to dissociate himself from the two strongest justifications for a functionally bilingual federal administration — history and linguistic justice. Now, history and justice have given way to expediency. "We have two official languages," Mr. Trudeau said, "because of a stark political reality. The stark reality is that neither French nor English-speaking Canadians are going to stop speaking their language or become bilingual en masse — and either group is large enough to break up this country."

What Mr. Trudeau is saying to French Canada is that the status of its language rests on numbers. If the French-speaking population continues to decline relative to the total population of the country, will French one day lose its official status? Or, might numbers eventually make Italian, German or Ukrainian official languages in Canada? Is the cradle to become a determining factor in national language policy?

Out at the New Ball Game

russell baker

If Ring Lardner were alive to write about baseball players nowadays, he might do it something like this, only better:

Friend Al:

I guess you seen in the papers where I'm playing out my option with the Mudvilles. It's the reporters here Al. All they want to do is cut me. I struck out with men on base in the bottom of the ninth yesterday and one of them writes Mighty Casey can't see the ball no more because his eyes is wore out studying the small print in the stock market quotations. I got a mind to bust him on the nose but they say it would hurt my image with the hair-oil advertisers which is bargaining for me to endorse them.

The papers don't say nothing about my going two for four and getting left on base both times. That Bloomfield who is batting behind me grounds out to shortstop both times. The second time I say Bloomfield they ain't paying you $600,000 to dribble grounders to the shortstop.

He goes hollering into the dugout and the manager comes out red as a waiter with a 10-cent tip on a $30 dinner. He says Don't you ever speak to Bloomfield again without getting an appointment from his secretary. Al I told you this is the big time. Bloomfield has got it in his contract that nobody speaks to him without an appointment, which is class. He is also endorsing only air-conditioning and auto tires.

I drove my Maserati to the park yesterday and that started the trouble. I usually take one of the Cadillacs but this time I want to stop at the bank and check my portfolio and then meet this TV clown. My agent says they are thinking of doing a weekly series about me and I figure the Maserati will pop his eyeballs and add a couple of hundred thou on to the front money.

So I go downtown and say This series ought to be called Mighty Casey and Alan Alda would be tops as me. Well he says We ain't thinking of a series exactly just a 10-minute interview in your penthouse so we can show your new oriental rugs and the Playboy pinups on the parlor wall. I was going to bust him but didn't have time as I was already late at the park so I cut him by saying Excuse me but I've got to get some decent air.

Then I drove the Maserati to the park and jumped out and suited up just in time for the pre-game conference on tax-shelter investments. The ninth inning come along, and it looks like we is beat by some good pitching in a dull game, and I cannot remember what lot I parked the Maserati on.

I am scratching my head when the manager says You going to sit there daydreaming about tax-free municipals or you going to bat? This is irony Al, which is not allowed under my contract so I says if you want to do irony I will phone my lawyer but if you want me to bat tell me what the score is.

Al you have got to stand up for your rights these days and he seen I meant to and backed down off his irony high horse. He says there is two out and we are three runs behind with the bases loaded, so all you got to do is hit a homerun.

The fans go busting out happy when they see it's Casey at the bat. Al they love you one minute and next they cut you. I'd like to bust their jaw, but I dig in because as soon as I hit the homerun I can get out of there early and fly my jet down to Philly to see Vera.

The first pitch is a watermelon. I am about to bust it but do not know which fence to hit it over because I don't know where the Maserati is parked and don't want it dented with no falling baseballs. Strike one says the umpire.

Umps I say did you happen to notice which of them lots has got a Maserati parked on it? All he wants to talk about is if I got any inside advice for the small investor.

The second pitch is a dinky little fast ball. I have a mind to put it over the right field fence except that's where I always parked the Cadillac so maybe I put the Maserati there too.

I decide to put it over the left field fence instead, then I figure I'll split the difference and put it over center field. So I no sooner get my mind made up than the Ump says Strike two.

The next pitch I am going to homer wherever it wants to go and let my agent sue the club for dents. It is a beauty and I am ready to blast it when the catcher says Hey Casey, I seen that Maserati out there on the lot. So I turn and says Where?

The Ump meanwhile says Strike three you're out. I could punch his jaw but my agent says it would give me a bad image. Anyhow I wouldn't because he is just a working stiff like me in the old days, so I will just give him a bum tip on the stock market. If my secretary don't get this spelled right it's because she ain't much of a secretary but has a lot of other things going for her if you get me. You know me Al

Plumbers, Bosses Agree on Restraint

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top executives of the plumbers' union and an employer's group have joined in calling for restraint and longer contracts during current negotiations.

A joint national policy commitee of the Plumbers, Pipefitters and Steamfitters Union and the Mechanical Contractors Association of Canada released recommendations Monday that were decided on about a week ago.

The joint statement says settlements close to federal Anti-Inflation Board guidelines of six per cent this year "would be reasonable."

It also calls on bargaining participants to give a demonstration of restraint by negotiating agreements of more than one year.

The statement covers more than 1,000 mechanical contractors and 33,000 members of the union's 43 locals.

"Every local in the country has its own autonomy," Russ St. Eloi, the union's national spokesman, said in a telephone interview Monday from Winnipeg.

"All we can do is try to convince them if they want controls off they have to show responsibility.

"There has got to be restraint and responsibility in the period after controls are lifted or there will be something in place of controls," he added.

The plumbers' union is one of three groups bargaining separately this year to replace contracts which expire Saturday. Also bargaining are 12 unions negotiating jointly under the British Columbia and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council.

Jim Kinnaird, president of the council, said he would not comment on the plumbers' and their employers' announcement because local negotiations are "at a critical stage."

The council asked for an increase of $1.30 an hour when talks began in February.

Chuck McVeigh, president of the B.C. Construction Labor Relations Association, said the six-per-cent guideline "may be their policy nationally but it certainly doesn't seem to be policy locally."

John Wynne, business manager for the plumbers' union, was not available for comment.

Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America, said, "if our people were getting $11 (an hour) like the plumbers, I guess we could talk restraint, too."

He said the guideline was not much of a sacrifice when pay scales were in the plumbers' range.

DOGFISH CATCH EYED

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Polish factory-trawlers will conduct an experimental fishery for dogfish off the B.C. coast this summer, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc announced Monday.

The two ships will fish in areas of heavy concentrations of the fish, considered a pest, to both reduce its population and to see if Canadians could start a commercial operation on the species, Leblanc said in a statement.

B.C. commercial fishermen have pressed for years for federal help to get rid of the dogfish which consume vast quantities of commercially valuable fish and destroy nets and gear. Federal subsidy programs have not been successful.

The minister said fisheries officials will be on the two vessels both to ensure compliance with Canadian fishing rules "but also to learn the techniques of catching and processing dogfish."

Handicap Centre To Open

Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen will officially open the Garth Homer Achievement Centre on Darwin Avenue in Saanich at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, May 15.

Among the guests of honor attending the opening of the centre for the handicapped will be the widow and daughters of the man after whom it is named. Mrs. Homer and her daughters, Jocelyn and Shannon, will cut the ribbon.

George Bate, the centre's executive director, estimates the first handicapped persons will start using the centre in early May.

Bate said residents of the nearby Battin-Fielding housing complex are the latest to offer assistance in equipping the centre. They will provide $1,500 worth of cups, saucers and plates.

The Victoria Kiwanis Club will donate $5,000 toward maintenance equipment.

Opening of the centre has been delayed since February due to problems in raising funds to complete the building.

After expenditure of more than $1 million, four directors of the Greater Victoria Activity Centre, as it was then called, took out a personal bank loan of $250,000 to get the centre operating.

One of them, Saanich alderman and finance chairman Joe Bourque, said today $55,000 of that amount has been recovered.

It is estimated it will take a total of $700,000 to complete the building.

Cheyenne Bidder Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — James Pattison was named Monday as the "local financier" who sought control of Cheyenne Petroleum Co., one of the companies licenced to produce natural gas in the Grizzly Valley area of northeastern British Columbia.

Barry Hemsworth, Cheyenne president, agreed under cross-examination that Pattison was the local financier. He was testifying at resumption of the public inquiry into possible conflict of interest by public officials in trading in companies associated with the Grizzly Valley pipeline project.

Hemsworth told the inquiry March 28 that a group of Vancouver Stock Exchange officials acted for "a local financier" in a takeover attempt of Cheyenne.

He said that R. M. Thompson of Pemberton Securities Ltd., and Peter Brown of Canarim Securities Ltd., both governors of the stock exchange, were each to receive a $25,000 finder's fee from Pattison for arranging the deal.

Hemsworth said the deal did not go through because Pattison did not agree to the price.

Under questioning, he said he thought Thompson and Brown were in conflict of interest as governors because of their involvement in the proposed deal.

Hemsworth said that the exchange, at the outset of the aborted deal, approved release of 25,000 Cheyenne shares from escrow, and their transfer to Pattison.

He said he felt that influence was brought to bear on the exchange to release the shares from escrow.

Prince George Gets Tax Break

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Homeowners here are getting a break from the provincial education ministry that will save them about $26 a year in taxes. The ministry's $43.6 million budget for school district 57, received here Monday, sets the 1977 mill rate at 49.7 instead of the 52.7 mill rate expected earlier. The new budget will mean a $26 increase in school taxes, but not the $52 increase that had been expected.

Fire Contained

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Firemen were containing a smouldering fire at the Fraser Valley Coal and Feed Co. Monday night. The building, containing 80 tons of coal and [illegible] burst into flames earlier in the day. No injuries were reported. Cause of the fire wasn't known and there was no estimate of damage.

Patronage Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cecil Cosulich, president of Rivtow Straits Ltd., Monday denied allegations made in the Commons by Ron Huntington (PC —Capilano) that political patronage was involved in Northland Navigation losing $3.1 million federal shipping subsidy last year. Huntington said that since the subsidy was removed and Rivtow took over the north coastal ferry service, the cost of living in the affected communities has skyrocketed and is still climbing. Rivtow recently announced new rates ranging between 15 per cent and 70 per cent higher.

Witness Rejected

NEW WESMINSTER (CP) — County court judge Murray Hyde Monday rejected a prosecution bid to introduce a new witness in its appeal of the acquittal of a Riverview hospital psychatric nurse charged with assaulting a mental patient. The judge said that both prosecution and defence had earlier argued against an attempt by the attorney-general's department to introduce witness Wendy Thomas, a nurse's aide at Riverview, at a late stage in the trial. Andrew Ashby, acquitted last November of assault causing bodily harm, was charged in an incident in which a patient suffered a broken nose.

Clyne Leaves M-B Board Today

VANCOUVER (CP)—John Valentine Clyne, chairman and chief executive officer of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. for most of his 20 years with the company, will step down as director today.

Clyne, 75, who resigned as chairman in 1973 to work as a full-time director, has asked that he not be renominated to the board at MacMillan Bloedel's annual meeting today.

Clyne, born in Vancouver, was a student protester, volunteer riot control squad member, sometime Monashee Mountains placer miner, cariboo cowboy, sawmill laborer and freighter deckhand.

He also was a lawyer, university rugby player and actor, first chairman of the federal Canadian Maritime Commission, and a B.C. Supreme Court judge.

How does Clyne explain the remarkable transitions that he has made in his life?

"Well, to become a judge, after all I was a lawyer," he said in a recent interview.

"The jump from the bench to business was a bit traumatic, because I enjoyed my life in the court very much.

"But on the other hand, the circumstances were somewhat special. H. R. MacMillan (former MacMillan Bloedel chairman) had been an old friend of mine and he was anxious to retire and at the moment he had no one to take his place."

Clyne, looking back on his full and varied past, said he wishes he had had the time for politics. He thinks "it's an obligation of all of us to make some kind of contribution to political life."

Clyne said he is not politically active although he knows powerful people in Canada, some with a bright political future.

He said reports that he has been the string-puller at the giant forest products company since he stepped down as chairman are nonsense.

Asked if his strong leadership produced a certain amount of senior executive turnover, Clyne said middle and senior management has developed at MacMillan Bloedel, enabling it to weather some of the storms of the last couple of years.

"I would never regard myself as being a very tough individual," he said.

He does not expect to feel bereft when he no longer heads downtown each morning to his 26th-floor office.

"I believe that one should retire when one believes that he is more or less in full control of his faculties and before he loses his ability to judge whether or not he is in such control."

CLYNE
. . . one-time judge

"To make plans for the future when you just don't know how long that future is, is wasting time," said Clyne.

"I'm going to do a lot of reading that I haven't had time to do, and I expect we'll do some more travelling."

Greenpeace Buys Sub Chaser

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation has bought a 175-foot sub chaser in Honolulu for $70,000, foundation spokesman Patrick Moore said Monday.

Moore said in a news release that the vessel, the Island Transport, is being prepared for a voyage in mid-June to harass Russian and Japanese whaling ships in the Pacific.

He said Greenpeace, which had a deficit following last year's attempts to harass the whaling fleets, paid for the vessel with money raised by various Greenpeace branches.

The vessel has a cruising speed of more than 20 knots, with a top speed of 26 knots, so it "will be able to catch the whaling ships under all conditions," Moore said.

He said it was built in Tennessee in 1942 as a coastal patrol vessel and during the Second World War sank two Japanese submarines.

Saw Father Killed . . . Son Kept Silent

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 14-year-old boy testified in B.C. Supreme Court Monday that when he was five years old he saw his father shot to death but told no one because the assailant told him not to say anything.

Tamas testified he was at the kitchen table, his father was serving lunch and a man and a woman were standing behind his father.

Tamas said he turned around and saw Crouse with a gun in each hand.

He said he was about to eat his scrambled eggs as his father handed him the plate when he heard a shot. He did not see it fired.

"I looked and there was my dad on the floor," he said. "Then I looked back and the guns were still in the accused's hands."

He said he thought has father in falling to the floor, was just fooling around and he turned around to the table and resumed eating his lunch.

Tamas said that one of the pair ran into his father's bedroom, came back with a sheet, rolled his father in it and they left for the basement.

He testified that Crouse returned and said to him: "Don't tell anyone."

Tamas said Crouse buried a gun in the garden, then he, Crouse, the 16-year-old girl Crouse lived with and their baby left in the victim's car and stayed in a hotel overnight.

Tamas testified they later went to Vancouver International Airport where Crouse bought him some toys, again told him not to tell anyone about the shooting and sent him to the boy's mother, who at that time was separated from hur husband.

The boy said he did not tell his mother about the shooting because "my dad taught me that when you are told 'don't tell anyone' you don't tell anyone."

Tamas said he did not talk about the shooting until he went to a police station with his mother and there he told a policeman about it.

The trial continues.

Williams Probes Alberta Hirings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams says his department is investigating complaints that an Alberta road construction company is violating its contract with the government of B.C. by hiring Albertans for an Alaska Highway project.

The government awarded a contract for the project between Dawson Creek and Fort St. John to North American Roadbuilders.

Jack Whittaker, president of Local 115 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, said Sunday the company is violating terms of its contract by hiring Alberta residents when B.C. residents are unemployed and avilable for work.

Whittaker said the contract stipulated that available B.C. workers be given priority, but that this is not happening.

Williams said later Sunday that officials of his ministry are monitoring employment to ensure contract terms are followed. He said industrial relations officers were sent to the project last week, and a report is expected later this week.

Meanwile, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said complaints about the Alberta contractor using workers from outside the province were unjustified.

Fraser said the Alberta firm got the contract because its bid was $650,000 lower than the closest B.C. bidder.

He said the firm is just starting on the job and only has eight men working — four key personnel brought in from Alberta and four B.C. employees.

Fraser said that once the firm really gets on with the job, only local workers will be hired.

The minister also said that B.C. this year will have the biggest road building program it has had in the last six or seven years, and except for this one contract, all the work will go to members of the B.C. Roadbuilders Association.

He added that last year the Operating Engineers and the Temster Unions had about 35-per-cent unemployed and this year he expects it will be down to 15 per cent.

Oil Talks Held

RIYADH (Reuter) — Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, trying to heal the split between oil-producing countries over prices, held his first round of talks Monday with Crown Prince Faud Ibn Abdulaziz of Saudi Arabia. Prince Faud said later that the talks would continue today.

Bennett Forced to Listen

An angry Surrey convenience store operator pushed her way into Premier Bill Bennett's office Monday to protest a 6 p.m. closing of a liquor store adjoining her business. Mrs. Harry Thornton said that since the store adopted earlier closing hours her business had dropped to $1,500 a month gross from $20,000 and she was in danger of losing both her store and her house. Mrs. Thornton arrived at Bennett's office at 10 a.m. and was told by John Arnett, the premier's press secretary, that Bennett would be tied up with appointments all day.

"I've tried to get an appointment for three weeks to no avail and I've waited eight months for some action," she said. With reporters and television cameras recording the incident, Arnett then asked Mrs. Thornton to wait a moment and went into Bennett's office. He later invited the woman and her husband to see the premier.

Bennett said he would not interfere politically with the distribution of liquor licences, store hours or locations.

The premier said professional people working for the liquor board carry out such functions and, if anyone wants to appeal their decisions, the proper route is through Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair.

He referred Mrs. Thornton to Mair's office but she was told the minister was at a meeting and there was no indication when he would return.

She and her husband were then directed to the office of Deputy Minister Tex Enemark.

They were told Enemark was out. Mrs. Thornton then phoned Mair's office and found the minister was there.

She said Mair told her on the phone he would not see her if she was accompanied by reporters.

"He was very upset with the fact that you reporters were there but I told him that, if it wasn't for the press, we would not have gotten as far as we did," she said.

Thornton said the minister said her complaint is under review and suggested she phone back later to see if something could be arranged.

SPRAY PLANS UNDER REVIEW

The controversial government budworm spraying program scheduled for the Fraser Canyon later this year will undergo an extensive review this week, Forest Minister Tom Waterland announced Monday.

Waterland said in a news release that 25 experts in all phases of insect spraying will meet in Victoria Thursday and Friday.

"Many questions were raised at our information sessions in the Fraser Canyon area earlier this month," the minister said.

Use Hot Water

Tax Cut No Help —Wolfe

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Monday that he disagrees with the Economic Council of Canada's suggestions for stimulating the British Columbia economy.

The council said last week in a report that a tax cut in B.C. would increase income and stimulate spending.

Wolfe, however, said in an interview the council's recommendations are based on obsolete information.

He said that in the current situation, a tax cut would not help the province's unemployment problem, which he said is the first priority.

The minister added that the government is encouraged by the recently-announced improvement in the United States housing market and that he feels it, in turn, will help B.C.'s economy.

Oil Agreement Disliked

SEATTLE (AP) — Reaction was predictably mixed Monday over an agreement among seven governors that Washington state should be a trans-shipment point for Alaska crude oil bound for the U.S. mid-east.

Norma Turner, president of a Port Angeles organization called No Oil Port, Inc., said she remains convinced the state does not need to be the shipment point for Alaska oil. Her group is particularly opposed to trans-shipment involving a Port Angeles terminal.

She said other proposals such as those to build a terminal at Kitimat or Long Beach, Calif., are superior to plans of the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. to build a Port Angeles terminal.

Her group does not endorse an Atlantic Richfield Co. plan to ship oil to Cherry Point and pipe it to the midwest through existing Canadian lines, she said.

Fielding Formway, Arco's Cherry Point refinery manager, called the resolution "somewhat discouraging for Arco."

"We will continue to develop our project and it will be there if it's needed," he said.

Ellen Peterson, speaking for the newly-formed San Juan citizens for responsible oil policy, said she would not mind Washington being a trans-shipment point — as long as the terminal would not involve shipping oil through the state's inland waters.

"We would definitely be opposed to a Cherry Point terminal, but not to a Port Angeles terminal," she said.

Lee Johnson, spokesman for the federal energy administration regional office, said the resolution marks the first time the governors of the northern tier states stated a single official preference on the subject of oil transportation.

The resolution, adopted Sunday at a meeting in Olympia, said the governors support the delivery of crude oil through a port in the state of Washington at a pipeline running from that port through the northern group of states.

Addiction Attack 'All Wrong'

FISHER

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Dr. Mark Fisher has the feeling he's a lone voice calling out in the wilderness.

The reason: he advocates free heroin for hardened addicts.

Not only that, he proposes much stiffer penalties — even the death penalty — for pushers.

The two measures have to go hand in hand, he says. One isn't good enough.

Society is far from accepting either and he thinks this is the tragedy that makes heroin addiction one of our toughest problems.

He is a general practitioner who has to deal with addicts as patients.

He is a Victoria school board trustee who has to deal with the drug problem in schools.

And most significantly he is the medical consultant at Victoria's methadone clinic, a position he's held since July, 1973.

★

Fisher says he can see certain values in the methadone program as a means of helping addicts break away from the criminal drug culture.

But the approach is "all wrong."

"The problem is heroin, not methadone," he says. "If you're going to deal with heroin you might as well deal with the same drug model instead of substituting a socially acceptable drug.

"Why does society consider methadone more acceptable than heroin when, in fact, it is just as addicting if not more so, and just as much of a problem as far as psychological withdrawal is concerned?

Fisher questions the success of the methadone program.

It has been estimated only about 5 per cent of all addicts avail themselves of the free treatment.

Only about 30 addicts are making the daily trip to the clinic in Vic West for their three-ounce shot of methadone mixed with Tang. Six months ago there were 45.

He contends addicts want heroin, vastly prefer it over methadone, and that if the drug was given under close medical supervision, addicts would no longer be able to cite their habit as an excuse for their criminal acts.

"As soon as you invalidate all the excuses, then at least you've got a handle on the problem," he says.

But heroin maintenance would not be successful, he says, without a more concerted effort to stop the pushers.

"I think society needs to re-evaluate its punitive measures," he says. "It may be less civilized but I believe the death penalty for pushers is the price we will have to pay."

Fisher says the onus is on the politicians and those in the medical profession to come up with a solution.

Both the provincial health minister, Bob McClelland, and the federal health minister, Marc Lalonde, are as adamantly opposed to heroin maintenance as the federal government is to reinstituting the death penalty.

Politically, the heroin maintenance issue is a hot potato, and supporters are hard to find.

"It's rather like saying I'm against motherhood and apple pie," says Fisher, "but attitudes can and do change. Who knows but maybe we'll all be against motherhood in 50 years when the world is totally over-populated."

Fisher believes the medical profession should be doing more because addiction, after all, is an illness. But little is done, he says.

"Most doctors prefer not to have anything to do with heroin addiction. The addict tends to be a pain as far as every day care. It's easier to give him a prescription and get him out of your hair than it is for him to create a scene. I know. I've had it here. I've had to throw addicts out."

Fisher says the heroin problem hasn't reached the point yet where society is prepared to say "Hey, look, let's do something about it."

★

He's convinced if anybody really made a specific impact on the drug culture that person would have the underworld on his doorstep ready to either eliminate him or buy him off.

"If Mr. McClelland took a stronger stand then I truly believe his life would be in danger," Fisher says.

Inevitable Result

For most heroin addicts, the road leads to prison as they turn to a life of crime to support their expensive habit. Dr. Mark Fisher, consultant at Victoria's methadone clinic, thinks society's approach to the problem is all wrong.

The juvenile had his story all ready.

He didn't have anything to do with the stolen vehicle he told police, he was simply hitch-hiking home from a party in Saanichton and the other guy (who had by this time scampered into the bush) had given him a ride.

The youth's mother was brought to the Saanich police station, and the interview continued, but he stuck to his story. Finally the mother suggested going to the "party house" to verify the story.

After much driving around the youth pointed to a house and told Constable Doug Oakley that's where the party was.

"Are you sure?" asked Oakley.

"Positive," came the reply.

"Impossible," said Oakley. "A policeman lives there and he's on duty."

The youth suggested the policeman had children who held the party without the parents knowing about it.

"The policeman doesn't have children," Oakley replied.

"How do you know?" the youth inquired.

"Because it's my house," Oakley said.

"The story began to unfold a little more accurately after that," Chief Bob Peterson said. The other boy was arrested a short while later.

Both will appear in family court this week to face auto theft charges.

Lum, who has another function to attend, agreed.

But Ald. Joe Bourque, who spearheaded the drive for the bikeway, reacted angrily, saying the mayor was motivated by political jealousy. The secretary said she was "very upset" that her suggestion had caused a misunderstanding.

"I just took it for granted Ald. Bourque would be there as a member of the ad hoc bikeway committee."

Trustee Peter Bunn wanted to know Monday night how much the district would have to pay.

A number of times he was told it all depended on the amount of the grants from Ottawa.

What if Ottawa decided o pull out altogether? How deep would the local taxpayer be in?

"Yes," he said. "In clear English . . . and just one side of the cornflake box."

Is there an exodus from Vancouver Island coming up?

A lot of people, mostly young, have been coming in for driver tests, so many that driver examiners had enough work by 9:30 this morning to keep them going until noon, says R. G. Whitlock, superintendent of motor vehicles.

It happens every spring, he says, usually when the University of Victoria school year ends. This year it's happened earlier than usual. Maybe it's young people planning to do their job-hunting in greener pastures.

Yachtsman Gordon Mesley, who wants a replica of the historic 39-foot trading schooner Northwest America constructed in the Inner Harbor as a bicentennial tribute to Capt. James Cook, is getting some results.

Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace has commended Mesley on his "keen interest in historical matters and marine history" and referred his project to the provincial government's Cook Bicentennial Committee.

Mesley, who sees the project as an ongoing tourist and educational one, says two naval architects have also expressed an interest.

Ex-Addict Suspended

A 23-year-old woman was put on probation for two years in county court today for possession of stolen property.

Judge Peter Millward found Lorna Price, of 407 William, guilty March 8 of possession of a guitar valued at more than $200, knowing it to have been stolen.

Defence counsel Darrel Woods said most of the previous offences involving the accused, mainly theft and false pretences, were committed to support her heroin drug habit between April, 1972, and June, 1974.

He said Price, also known as Lorna Lesher and Lorna McDannold, was short of money at the time of the offence last November, and was trying to support a three-year-old daughter and stay on the methadone drug withdrawal program.

"It seems you are making some effort to rehabilitate yourself," Millward said. "The effort seems largely unsuccessful up to this point. But it may be that the principal factor in your lengthy criminal behavior is due to the drug problem."

Judge Millward noted previous short sentences had been of little help and felt another period of confinement would have little effect.

He suspended sentence, "accepting the most charitable view, that there was no criminal intent behind the offences," on condition the accused follow prescribed medical treatment, abstain from drugs except those prescribed, and submit to any drug test requested by police.

18-Month Perjury Sentence

A murder trial witness who denied helping to move the victim's body was sentenced today to 18 months in jail for perjury.

Russell Benjamin Mutter, 22, was charged after giving evidence in the trial of David John Ross, convicted of murder punishable by life imprisonment for the shooting of Malcolm Preston Cunningham, Nov. 1, 1975.

The Crown alleged Mutter helped Ross to move the body after the two and another man drove to the murder scene later that day.

County court Judge M. L. T. Drake said he believed the testimony of witness Rodney Steigenburger, who said Ross and Mutter did move the body.

Crown counsel Armand Petronio asked for a penitentiary sentence, or a minimum two years, which would have meant he would serve his sentence with Ross.

Citizens Force Rezoning Delay

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A stormy public hearing Monday forced Saanich council to postpone a decision on rezoning 80 acres in the North Quadra area from rural to single-family homes.

One the suggestion of Ald. John Mika, the decision will not be made until the community plan for that area has been aired at a public meeting, scheduled in May.

Mondays hearing was accompanied by charges of mistrust of council, jeers and catcalls at Mayor Ed Lum and some aldermen.

Residents made it clear they did not trust council's move to rezone to single-family homes, believing this was "the thin edge of the wedge leading to townhouse development. Only seven persons spoke in favor of the rezoning.

MIKA
. . . knocks committee

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said the strong opposition was unprecedented, adding it is "very significant' that only two of the speakers are now farming land in the area—one of the few remaining prime undeveloped areas in Saanich. At one point Lum threatened to adjourn the hearing unless order was restored.

H. W. Thompson of Lily Avenue said he opposed the rezoning "because I don't trust council," and Harry Young of Quadra Street opposed it because he said one of the roads proposed would run right through his duck pond and living room.

W. G. Moore of Dieppe Road said real estate board figures showed 1,940 homes listed for sale in Greater Victoria. This, he said, did not include private sales or exclusive listings of sales by builders.

"People who have their own homes are denying others the right to a home," accused Ald. Sandy Noel, adding it is vital the land be rezoned so sewers can be installed.

"The public doesn't trust this council," Ald. John Mika told fellow aldermen.

He criticized the lands, planning and housing committee for "dereliction of duty" in not discussing "an excellent letter" on the North Quadra area sent to council by a Saanich resident.

Several residents told council they would not oppose the rezoning if they were given assurance that no townhouses would be allowed. Aldermen said no council could give such a guarantee.

$4,101 Back To Developer

The Greater Victoria school board Monday agreed it has a moral responsibility to return a $4,101 overpayment by developer Hans Hartwig in his 1976 tax assessment for school purposes.

Two of Hartwig's Diversified Holdings Ltd. properties were accidentally over-assessed but Hartwig's appeal to the Court of Appeals last year was too late.

Trustees re-adjusted the 1977 taxation rate by a fraction of a mill and will send Hartwig a cheque as soon as the money has been collected.

Trustee Daphne Temple questioned why the district is being asked to reimburse him when according to a report, Hartwig is on an extended holiday and was not concerned about the assessment when he received it early in 1976.

Hal Knight suggested Hartwig was "rather delinquent" in waiting too long to appeal the over-assessment, but neither trustee voted against paying the money back after Peter Dorazio pointed out even though the district has no legal obligation to make payment, Hartwig overpaid because of an error.

The city of Victoria has agreed to pay back its share of the overpayment if it receives permission from the provincial government.

Door-to-Door Sellers Shine Their Image

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Have you been bothered by a high-pressure salesman who refuses to take "not interested" for an answer and persists with foot-in-door obstinacy to push his product?

Or have you recently bought a product from a door-to-door salesman which you realize, after the dust has settled, you don't want or don't know too much about?

If you have, then the Better Business Bureau in Victoria has your interests at heart.

The bureau has set up a special committee of representatives from direct selling companies who are BBB members to promote public confidence in such sales and self-regulation of sales staff and techniques.

Larry Scott, chairman of the bureau's new committee, said in an interview Monday people are wary of door-to-door salesmen.

"There is an automatic resistance to direct selling people and in many cases that is justified because of past experiences," he said.

He said many unscrupulous salesmen work on people's fears or personal inadequacies to sell their products.

Those direct selling companies which belong to the bureau have decided to try to polish their image and eliminate the shysters.

Direct sales refers to any form of personal selling by which a product is offered directly to the consumer at home.

The 11 direct selling companies which make up the committee have adopted the following policies:

—to promote self-regulation among direct selling companies through regular information meetings;

—to improve the quality and character of direct selling companies and salesmen and women using established standards of practice of the BBB for the people of Greater Victoria;

—to educate and inform the public in the interests of better direct selling through regular publications.

The committee members have also adopted rules of conduct related to integrity, respect for the consumer's privacy and responsibility for the sales practices of their sales staff.

Scott sees this effort to clean up the reputation of the door-to-door salesman as a means of dampening inflation.

The companies involved are in the sales business and the more they sell the more they can afford to keep their prices down, he says.

He says the program will also fight unemployment because the more business the companies do the more people they can afford to employ.

Eventually, Scott says, the salesmen from the companies which belong to the Better Business Bureau will be given a decal, indicating their membership, which they will display when approaching a consumer.

The direct selling companies who are members of the bureau are, the Canadian Family Record Plan, Electrolux, J K Industries, J A N Distributors, Techram Industries, Best-O-Milk Products, Vita-Luv, Victoria Diner Service, Encyclopedia Britannica, Island Security Patrol Ltd., and Amway.

Lafarge

Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. reports net earnings of $23,177,000, or $1.18 a share, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1976, compared with $24,337,000 or $1.25 a share in 1975.

Sales amounted to $384,789,000 in 1976, down four per cent from $398,919,000 in 1975.

The company said lower earnings — down five per cent from the previous fiscal year — resulted from a decline in cement consumption to 9.9 million tons in 1976, from 10.1 million tons in 1975.

Premier

Premier Cablevision Ltd. of Vancouver, reports a dividend of 20 cents per share, to be paid on May 27, 1977 out of the retained earnings of the company to shareholders of record at the close of business on May 4, 1977. The rate of government withholding tax for non-residents (U.S.A.) is 10 per cent.

Consol-Bathurst

Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. lost $4.6 million in the first quarter of 1977 because of the anticipated $5-million cost of closing its newsprint plant in Cap de la Madeleine, company president William Turner says.

Turner told shareholders that before this expense the company had an operating profit for the first quarter of $419,000, or one cent a share, compared with $1.1 million, or 10 cents a share for the same period last year.

Turner predicted results for the entire year will top the $18.2 million earned in 1976 on sales of 745.2 million. U.S. newsprint demand is expected to rise four per cent to 10 million tons this year, allowing Canadian newsprint mills to work at 86 per cent of capacity.

First quarter sales were $190.6 million, up 25 per cent from the same period last year.

The company also expects to realize an extraordinary gain later this year when it receives an insurance settlement for fire damage to its Braeside sawmill in Ontario.

AMC

American Motors Corp. reports its profits in the first three months of 1977 more than doubled from the same period last year to $2.5 million, despite a worsening sales slump.

The smallest of the U.S. car producers said dollar sales in the January-March period declined 10 per cent from a year ago to $534 million.

AMC has been in a severe the January-March period declined 10 per cent from a year ago to $534 million.

AMC has been in a severe auto slump for two years, and its U.S. car sales in the period — the second quarter of its fiscal year — dropped 29 per cent from the already sluggish levels of the year before.

However, heavy losses in the car operations were offset by strong performances by the firm's Jeep and bus-making subsidiaries, AMC officials said.

Kodak

Eastman Kodak Co. reports its first-quarter net earnings fell 20 per cent despite a five-per-cent increase in sales.

The company said its net earnings for the first quarter were $94,173,000, or 58 cents a share, down from the $118,067,000, or 73 cents a share, in net earnings for the same period in 1976.

Sales were $1.197 billion, up from $1.142 billion.

Operating net for the period was $175,801,000, compared to $197,386,000 in the first period of last year.

Kodak said rising sales of instant photo products have not reached the point where manufacturing, marketing and distribution costs were offset fully. It cited the inability to raise prices sufficiently to counteract rising costs, larger foreign currency exchange losses and a higher effective tax rate among the major reasons for the lower earnings.

Garibaldi Lifts

Garibaldi Lifts Ltd. has reported reduced revenue and earnings for 1976 because of a mild winter which had a disastrous effect on the ski industry in British Columbia. The company, which operates Whistler Mountain ski resort 55 miles north of Vancouver, reported net earnings of $167,226 or $21.63 a share, compared with $331,932 or $44.68 a share in 1975. Revenue from operations was $2.08 million, compared with $2.18 million the previous year. The company said the year's earning were helped by good snow conditions in the earlier part of 1976.

Vestgron

Vestgron Mines Ltd. reports that unaudited net earnings for the quarter ended March 31, were $626,000 or 15 cents a share for the corresponding period in 1976. O. E. Owens, company president, said improvement in earnings resulted mainly from lower interest costs. Sales were $5.9 million, compared with $6.1 million for the same period in 1976. Vestgron, 63 per cent owned by Cominco Ltd. operates the Blaca Angel lead-zinc mine on the west coast of Greenland north of the Arctic Circle, through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Greenex A-S.

Northwest

Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., operators of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, reports net earnings of $625,318 or 63 cents a share for the six months ended Feb. 28.

The figures were down slightly from earnings of $656,673 or 66 cents a share from the corresponding period in the previous year.

Revenues increased to $5.7 million from $5.5 million but operating expenses increased to $4.6 million from $4.2 million.

Gen. Distributors

General Distributors of Canada Limited reports lower net earnings, despite an increase of 9.6 per cent to $206,401,954 in consolidated sales in the year ended Jan. 31, 1977.

In his annual report to shareholders, President Albert D. Cohen said net income from operations declined to $4,353,795 from $5,523,408 in the previous year.

Earnings per share on 6.1 million common shares also declined to 75 cents from 90 cents, including extraordinary profits of $218,931 from the sale of some properties.

White Pass

White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd. of Vancouver reports net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1976, declined to $816,000 or 24 cents a common share from $15 million or 60 cents a share in 1975

Revenue of $52764,00,0 was derived, down from $57949,0,00 in 1975 ,the company said in a news release.

Stewart Searle Jr., chairman, and Richard Hubber-Richard, president, said in the annual report that that main cause of the decreases was mining industry shutdowns due to strikes.

Acquisition of Pioneer Alaska Express, Inc., an Alaska-based trucking firm, was completed Oct. 25, 1976, and its operations from that date were fully consolidated.

Also during the year, Federal Industries Ltd. of Winnipeg, increased its holding of White Pass common shares to 100 per cent.

White Pass is engaged directly and through subsidiaries in all forms of surface transportation for industry in Alaska, the Yukon, Northwest Territories, Alberta and British Columbia.

Xerox

Xerox Corp. reports earnings of $91.6 million or $1.15 a share for the first three months of this year compared with $82 million or $1.03 in the similar 1976 period.

Revenues rose to $1.19 billion from $1.03 billion.

The company said it was "making steady progress toward another record year" in 1977.

Pacific Pete

Pacific Petroleums Ltd. has voted a semi-annual dividend of 43.2 cents per share payable on June 30, to shareholders of record on June 7.

The dividend is the maximum the company is permitted to pay under the current Canadian anti-inflation guidelines.

Power

Power Crop. of Canada Ltd. says inflation was chiefly responsible for a drop of more than $24 million in profits last year.

Net earnings were $10,472,000 or 80 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1976, compared with $34,950,000 or $2.33 a share in 1975.

Gross revenue from operations amounted to $244,668,000 in 1976, compared with $293,104,000 in 1975.

The Laurentide Financial Corp. and Montreal Trust Co. were the only Power Corp. subsidiaries to report increased earnings.

Laurentide reported earnings of $6,051,000 or $1.19 a share in 1976, 14 per cent higher than 1975 earnings of $5,516,000 or $1.04 a share.

Earnings for Montreal Trust totalled $4,967,000 or $1.93 in 1976, compared with $4,257,000 or $1.65 a share in 1975.

Among subsidiaries reporting lower earnings were the Investors Group, the Imperial Life Assurance Co. of Canada, the Great-West Life Assurance Co. and Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd.

Balco

Balco Industries Ltd. reports net earnings of $1,534,683 or $1.53 a share for the year ended Nov. 30, 1976, compared with $371,468 or 37 cents a share the year before.

In the company's annual report, president D. L. Balison said the demand for Canadian lumber in the United States, with a strong housing market, is expected to improve.

The Canadian housing market is down, he said, and will affect sales of lumber and plywood.

Capital Cable

Capital Cable TV Ltd. of Edmonton has reported a sharp increase in earnings for the six months ending Feb. 28.

Earnings per share before extraordinary items were 30.5 cents, an increase of seven cents per share reported for the same period last year.

Total income for the period was $3,160,657, up from $2,674,425. Expenses increased to $1,863,614 from $1,604,311. Net income, after provision of $315,949 for income taxes, was $304,714, compared with $235,188.

Not Very Well Done, And Embarrassing Too

That was quite a victory by the Soviet Union in the latest world hockey championship series. "We showed 'em," the Russians can honestly say after the 11-1 drubbing the Canadians took on Sunday. And Vancouver Canuck player Don Lever probably said it for all the players when he was being interviewed.

"The players are worried about what the people back home are thinking."

Well, there's no worry there Don, old chap. The players stunk the place out and will forever be an embarrassment to Canada. And sure, it smarted, even here, as the Russians poured it on. But what would you do, if you were an athlete and had the sassy Canadians on the run? You'd lay it on them.

And there was little Canadian sportsmanship evident either as the reporters who were there have indicated with significant blasts at the players, some of whom, one said, "should never have been allowed to wear a Maple Leaf on their jerseys." That's a severe condemnation.

So now what happens? Nothing, I guess, because Team Canada is committed to a beating, or does anyone think they can do an about-face, qualify for the final round of the championship and give the Soviets a taste of their own brilliance? Not likely. Or maybe a better idea would be to fly the Montreal Canadiens in for a game or two. That might get some prestige back for the country. Otherwise, all seems lost. Hopelessly so.

Oh well, and I suppose that everyone has noted that Seattle Mariners, although they aren't winning as many games as they would like, are in second place in the American League West in home-run production, right behind the California Angels, or were when the last statistics were issued. And there-in lies a tale, as the Mariners had played 10 of their 13 games in the Kingdome at that time and the Angels had played five games in Seattle.

Many people thought it was the fact that the Mariners had switched from the Spaldings ball to the Rawlings ball and that's where the extra distance was coming from. But not so.

An enterprising reporter from the Seattle PI figured out what others couldn't. He simply got out his handy tape measure and put it on the "power alleys" in the Kingdome and came up with a startling fact.

It wasn't 375 feet to the fence in right centre and left centre. It was only 357 feet, and it wasn't 316 feet to the left field foul pole, either. It was only 314 feet, six inches. The right field marker of 316 feet was correct and it was indeed a solid blow to deep centre field at 410 feet.

What else does it prove? Well, for one thing, the players know they aren't hitting the ball as far as they thought they were; if that matters. But those pitchers — they'll be crying.

And it deserves more than passing mention too that another era has ended with the withdrawal of Ian Scott-Moncrief of Scorpions from sponsorship in basketball. He will be missed as he pumped more than a few thousand dollars into Victoria's Senior A Men's Club. It was unfortunate that things didn't pan out for Ian in his never-ending battle with Dogwood League officials mostly over the matter of finances. He came close to one dream, however, as his 1975 club came within six points of a Canadian championship, losing to Winnipeg by that narrow margin in the clutch final. Then last season with Canada's national captain, Bill Robinson of Chemainus, in the fold, his exhibition schedule didn't work out exactly as planned, a planned trip to New Zealand fell through and the Scorps didn't quite measure up to the '75 squad.

Then there was the case of the famous two points (in black and white) lost on the scoresheet in the B.C. final, and obviously costing the Scorpions a chance at victory. It's little wonder that Scott-Moncrief eventually took gas over that decision. Oh boy! That was a sad day for the Scorpions and basketball. And now it may be quite a while before another sponsor of his dedication, interest and financial backing is found for the sport here. He was good for the game, even if it wasn't that kind to him in return.

BASSETT CHIDES EAGLESON

Team Canada—Other Thoughts

Times News Services

The repercussions from Canada's 11-1 loss to Russia in the world hockey championships Sunday were still reverberating throughout the hockey world as Canada prepared to take on Czechoslovakia today.

John Bassett, owner of the World Hockey Association Bulls, took a crack at Alan Eagleson, chairman of international hockey for Canada for a remark made by Eagleson earlier this season.

Eagleson criticized the Winnipeg Jets' participation in the December Izvestia Cup tournament in Moscow by saying: "Sending a second rate team to a high calibre tournament was foolish on the part of everyone concerned." The Jets finished fourth in the tournament with a 1-2-1 record losing 6-4 to the U.S.S.R. and 3-2 Czechoslovakia.

"It was very unfair," Bassett said, adding "it's interesting that this team that beat Canada 11-1 was exactly the same team that New England and Quebec defeated in the seven-game series they had with our clubs last year."

Bassett said it would have made more sense to send a club team, such as Birmingham of the WHA or Cleveland Barons of the NHL, to the tournament because "you must have a prepared unit to play against the Europeans."

Scotty Bowman, who coached Team Canada '76 to victory in the Canada Cup tournament last fall said he feels a lack of preparation is a major reason for the rugged time Team Canada 77 is having. "They weren't given the same opportunity as we were," he said. "I think the Canadian team can do better and will do better," said Bowman. "When you are not involved in something it's not fair to pick it apart."

Canadian sports writers and columnists generally had scathing remarks for Team Canada and particularly Wilf Paiement.

"The prestige and credibility of Canadian hockey was destroyed on the banks of the not so blue Danube here by a collection of players, some who should never have been allowed to wear a Maple Leaf on their jerseys," wrote sports editor George Gross in the Toronto Sun.

"It was the way they lost that Canadians should be ashamed of," wrote Jean Aucoin in Montreal Matin. "Wilf Paiement and Walt McKechnie again acted like savages and they have begun to specialize in tarnishing the image of Canadian hockey abroad."

Paiement, the Colorado Rockies forward who took 11 minutes in penalties, was singled out for particular criticism.

Al Strachan, writing in the Montreal Gazette, described Paiement as a "malicious buffoon" and said he "looked more like a lumberjack than a hockey player as he roared around the rink bouncing his stick off Russians."

The Toronto Star's sports editor Jim Proudfoot said, "Team Canada, with its grab-bag collection of also-rans and retreads, was in several miles over its head in game three of the world championship schedule.

"The Canadians resorted to petulant cheap shots in the second half of the match after falling eight goals behind."

"There were moments when the animals ran the zoo in game three of these friendly matches," wrote Red Fisher in the Montreal Star. "I'm almost prepared to accept an 11-1 lashing when I look at the individual brilliance of those Soviets and the National Hockey League rejects on Team Canada. What I refuse to buy is the continuing notion of Lady Byngers that one overseas flight provides them with the privilege of becoming lady bangers . . .

"Paiement's action, no matter what the provocation happened to be in his own mind, was vintage Vienna Woods, Bush, that is. If anybody associated with hockey can persuade me that this spoiled, overpaid brat deserves to continue playing with Team Canada, he's quite a salesman."

Said Claude Larochelle in Quebec Le Soleil: The whole venture was idiotic from the start . . . and seems to have deteriorated to an absolute shambles to the point where nobody seems willing to stop the extravagances of Wilfred Paiement. Yesterday's exhibition was pitiful to watch as our athletes, totally dominated by the superb Soviets . . . resorted to an imbecilic demonstration of strongarm tactics in order to vent their blind frustrations."

Jim Coleman wrote that "even some of our older and more experienced players seem to be taking leave of their senses."

"As Phil Esposito stomped through the corridor on his way to the dressing room at the conclusion of last night's second period, he passed a pair of Soviet civilians who were just standing there minding their own business.

"Phil turned toward those two Soviet civilians who, if they understood English, must have been slightly surprised to hear Esposito snarl bitterly, 'You bunch of bleeping cheaters'."

Vancouver Sun columnist Jim Kearney, reacting to Paiement's on-ice indiscretions, suggested the young player's problem "might best be described as gross immaturity, which likely can happen to any young man of 20 when is paid $170,000 a season to exhibit his limited skills in the show business of North American professional hockey, then finds out in the pressure cooker of international play he doesn't know what the game's all about."

'Bitter' Press Deplored by Iona

VIENNA (CP) — Iona Campagnolo, the Canadian minister of state for fitness and amateur sport, hasn't been impressed with the coverage of the world hockey championship in Vienna newspapers.

"I do think the press coverage here in Vienna has been particularly bitter," she said while co-host at a reception with Thomas Carter, the Canadian ambassador to Vienna, for Canada's team in the tournament.

"It looked almost exultant. One of the headlines I read was 'Canada Executed.' This is not the kind of thing we would say in our press in Canada."

Minnesota Star Sets Up Sweden

VIENNA, Austria (CP) — Roland Eriksson of Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League collected three goals as Sweden topped West Germany 7-1 and remained unbeaten in the world hockey championships Monday.

The Soviet Union, favored to win the title, overwhelmed weak Romania 18-1 in a game without a penalty and scarcely a single body check.

That left the Soviet Union and Sweden co-leaders with eight points each after four victories apiece. Czechoslovakia has six points in three games.

Eriksson, 23, and the only NHL player on the Swedish team, scored once in the first period and twice in the second as the Swedes built a 5-0 lead after two periods.

Canada was scheduled to face Czechoslovakia at noon today.

The Canadians, already without most of their best players because of the Stanley Cup playoffs, had more bad news. Jean Pronovost of Pittsburgh Penguins, one of their best offensive performers here, was sidelined for the rest of the tournament with a broken collarbone suffered in the second period of Sunday's 11-1 loss to the Soviets.

In previous games the power play of the Swedes had not been impressive, but Monday they scored three times while West Germany was shorthanded.

Eriksson scored twice in a span of 1½ minutes in the second period when the Germans received seven penalties.

Reds Sack Braves, Equal NL Record

By The Associated Press

The awakening Cincinnati Reds did not wash away their frustrations Monday night. Instead, they almost washed away Atlanta Braves.

Apparently determined to prove that anything Los Angeles Dodgers can do, they can do better, the world-champion Reds, who had scored only 25 runs in their previous seven games and went to Atlanta with a four-game losing streak and a 4-10 record, unloaded 18 hits and buried the Braves 23-9 in a National League baseball game.

General Sherman could not have sacked Atlanta any better, although the Dodgers teed off on the Braves' beleaguered pitching staff for 16 runs and 16 hits Sunday.

"You don't wash away frustrations with games like these, you do it by winning 2-1 games," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson, who benched all-star catcher Johnny Bench Sunday and threatened to sit down other non-producers.

"I'd rather see a well-played game than one like this one. Don't get me wrong, I like to win any way we can, but the other kind pleases me more. This kind is nice when you're on the right end of it, but I don't enjoy them because when you're on the other end it's not very pleasant."

In the only other National League game, the Dodgers whipped San Diego Padres 7-3 as Ron Cey walloped his sixth and seventh home runs of the season. The St. Louis-Chicago game was postponed by cold weather.

In the American League, New York Yankees defeated Baltimore Orioles 9-6, California Angels trimmed Oakland A's 11-6 and Boston Red Sox edged Toronto 6-5 after the Blue Jays won the opener of a doubleheader 4-3.

The Reds scored six runs in the first inning and erupted for 12 runs in the fifth, tying a modern National League fifth-inning record and scoring the most runs against the Braves since they moved from Milwaukee to Atlanta in 1966.

Hoop Referees End Strike Against NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — A strike of National Basketball Association officials ended Monday and the league announced its regular referees would begin working playoff games immediately.

The settlement was announced by Simon Gourdine, NBA deputy commissioner and labor negotiator for the league.

Twenty-four of the 26 regular NBA officials had walked out at the end of the regular season, refusing to report for assignments on Sunday, April 10, with only veterans Earl Strom and Richie Powers continuing to work.

The dispute centred on a disagreement regarding the referee association's status as a union and the absence of a contract for working playoff games.

The first round of the playoffs and early second-found games were officiated by minor league referees.

Gourdine said agreement was reached late Sunday night.

"The referees have agreed to return to work without a contract," Gourdine said. "Next year's contract will be negotiated during the off-season."

Elements of the agreement call for an across-the-board increase of $150 a game for the remainder of the playoffs, increasing their compensation to $750, $850 and $950 a game.

The NBA also agreed to recognize the association as the collective bargaining representative of the referees.

Nordiques Top Racers Again

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Nordiques took a 2-0 lead in their World Hockey Association best-of-seven semi-final series Monday when they beat Indianapolis Racers 8-3.

Steve Sutherland, a lanky leftwinger from Noranda, Que., scored three goals. Marc Tardif and Normand Dube, both playing in their second game of the playoffs after being sidelined by injuries, also scored.

Each team had 10 shots on goal in the first period. The Nordiques led 2-1 at the end of the first, then scored four times in the second period.

In the first 15 minutes of the first period, fast skating, close checking and tight defensive play kept both teams off the score board.

Thirty seconds later Sutherland snatched a pass in the slot and drove it in for his first goal of the series.

Sutherland's second goal came as he tipped in a shot by Wally Weir with 24 seconds left in the second period. His third goal, at 1:14 of the third period, was unassisted as he backhanded the puck into the net.

The first two Indianapolis goals came when Quebec's Bob Fitchner was in the penalty box.

WESTS SEEK VENGEANCE

Victoria West will be seeking revenge for Sunday's Jackson Cup loss while facing Victoria Athletics in the Vancouver Island Soccer League's premier division playoff final at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Royal Athletic Park.

Athletics, who earlier won the McGavin Cup, posted a 3-1 victory in the Jackson Cup final but Wests won both league games between the two squads without giving up a goal—4-0 and 3-0.

Mitchell Keeps Grapple Crown

Guy Mitchell retained his Pacific Coast title by taking two out of three falls in the main bout of a professional wrestling card Monday night at Memorial Arena.

Texas Outlaw and Joe Palardi downed Buck Zumhofe and Gama Singh in one of two semi-final tag-team matches while Eddy and Jerry Morrow bounced Buddy Austin and Jim Cook in the other bout. The two winners meet May 2 in Vancouver for the Canadian title.

Aggravated Battery

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A state warrant was issued Monday charging second-baseman Lenny Randle of Texas Rangers with aggravated battery in the spring-training camp beating of Rangers manager Frank Lucchesi.

Randle is charged with beating Lucchesi in Orlando as the two were discussing Randle's status in the American League baseball club's lineup. Lucchesi spent seven days in hospital.

The baseball player was reported to be angry over losing his starting job to rookie Bump Wills.

Local prosecutors said they teletyped the warrant to police in Arlington, Tex., and Tempe, Ariz., where Randle may be staying. They said they will extradite him unless he surrenders voluntarily.

State Atty. Robert Eagan of Orlando said his office had been investigating the incident since it happened. He said it was his decision to file the warrant and said the decision was made "without any prompting from the Texas Rangers ownership."

The Rangers already have suspended Randle for 30 days and levied fines totalling $10,000. Including loss of income, Randle's actions have cost him $23,000 so far.

The charge, a second-degree felony, carries a maximum 15-year prison term and-or a $10,000 fine.

Islanders Might Be Down But Habs Aren't Relaxing

Tonight's game between Montreal Canadiens and New York Islanders will be telecast on channels 2 and 6 starting at 5 o'clock.

MONTREAL (CP) — New York Islanders may be down but they certainly cannot be considered out of their National Hockey League best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

The Islanders, who meet the Canadiens tonight in the second game of the series at the Forum, dropped a 4-3 decision to Montreal on Saturday night, blowing a 3-1 lead in the process.

"You have to go after them. We varied away from our system in the third period. We stopped hitting and playing our type of game.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman expects the Islanders to come on strong once again and he wants to make sure his club does the same.

"Their strategy of taking the play to us is no different from any other team," he said. "But if you sit back against a thing like that, you can get yourself into trouble."

Bowman said he felt if the Islanders had been able to escape from the second period with a two-goal lead, they could have had Montreal on the ropes during the final period.

"They got us down and we had to open up a bit. They had a lot of good scoring chances in the second period. We weren't playing disciplined hockey."

Bowman said the Islanders did a few things differently against his club Saturday night and perhaps will do the same tonight.

"They were throwing men up the middle more than they have before," said Bowman. "As a result, their centres had some excellent scoring chances.

"I didn't think there would be as many goals Saturday night as there were. In most of our games, there hasn't been a great deal of scoring. Our goals-against average was under three this year and so was theirs."

Following tonight's game, which will be televised on the CBC network, the series shifts to Uniondale, N.Y., for games Thursday and Saturday.

ALL EIGHT ARE BACK IN HEYWOOD LEAGUE

All eight teams are back and every one will see action Sunday as the 1977 Heywood Park Men's Fastball League season gets underway at Heywood Avenue Park.

Taylor House Moving faces Century Inn at 11 a.m.; Castle Properties and Hygrade Radio clash at 1 p.m.; Remco Office Systems and Webb and Trace collide at 3 p.m. and Esquimalt Ocean Express and Capital Builders meet at 6:30 p.m.

Capital Builders will be seeking a fourth straight league title and Hygrade, which finished second in the league last year, are the defending playoff champions.

Cherry Bullish on Bruins —Sees Club Cup Contender

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Bullish on Boston? Why not, says coach Don Cherry, trying to improve the public image of his Bruins as a Stanley Cup contender.

Cherry feels the Bruins deserve more recognition than they've been getting after winning their division title in the regular National Hockey League season, and doing well in the playoffs so far.

Boston upset Philadelphia Flyers 4-3 on Rick Middleton's overtime goal Sunday night in the first game of their best-of-seven semi-final series. They resume play tonight in the second game at the Spectrum with another sellout assured.

Boston won the Adams Division title with 106 points to 104 for runner-up Buffalo. In the Cup quarter-finals, the Bruins edged Los Angeles four games to two while Buffalo bowed to New York Islanders four straight.

The Bruins were the only club to defeat Montreal three times in the regular season, but against the Flyers they could win only one of four.

Although the Bruins have taken away the Flyer home-ice advantage, Cherry fears that the way the Flyers were coming on the third period Sunday night, when they tied the game 3-3, could be an indication of what Philadelphia's real strength is all about.

"We were just hanging on there at the end," Cherry said after the Bruins were outshot 15-2 in the third period and Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers survived on what he felt was pure luck.

Middleton didn't exactly agree with his coach's assessment of Boston's third-period play.

"We were hanging back because the wingers were coming back so far," Middleton said. "It looked like we weren't skating, but we were."

Defenceman Brad Park of the Bruins, recalling last year's players when the Flyers eliminated the Bruins in five games in the semi-finals, said the 1977 Boston team is stronger.

"We think we've made some improvements. We think we're a stronger coub and we're playing better hockey now than at this time last year. We have some terrific rookies and if we play like this again, we'll do all right."

Philadelphia coach Fred Shero planned to go with Wayne Stephenson in goal tonight with Bernie Parent again on the sidelines, this time suffering from a sore foot. Stephenson played 40 minutes Sunday night, allowing three goals. Then Parent came in for the third period and in overtime knocked in Middleton's winning goal after making the save.

Japan's Golf Handicaps No Reflection of Ability

Ever since Torakichi (Pete) Nakamura and Koichi Ono won the Canada Cup (now the World Cup) in 1957, Japan has been enveloped in a golf boom the likes of which haven't been seen since the Japanese adopted baseball as their No. 1 sport.

Today, some 10 million Japanese are infected to varying degrees with the joys and frustrations of the game, and, as a whole, they do commendably well. When the Japanese decide to do something, they do it thoroughly. Golf has been no exception.

They have assimilated every detail of the game from the West, but with one very important difference: the handicap.

By utilizing the lowest 10 of a golfer's 20-most recent rounds, a handicap — as North Americans know it — helps determine one's average ability in respect to par. In theory, a scratch (0) player should score 70 on a par 70 course. A 10-handicapper would be right on his average game if he scored 80.

Thus, fairly handicapped, golfers of differing abilities have a chance of competing on equal terms — with each other and with par.

Ask a Japanese golfer what his handicap is and he may give you one of three answers: one that is too low, one that is too high, or one that reflects his present level of skill.

In all three cases, he is being honest.

It is an anomaly of golf in Japan that one's handicap need have little relation to the quality of golf one happens to be playing at the moment.

By the definition widely accepted among Japanese, a golfer's handicap is something pegged to his game at its peak, whether that means today or several years ago.

Golfers in the rest of the world find this difficult to understand. After all, how can handicaps serve their purpose as equalizers among players of different abilities unless they are kept up-to-date?

The Japanese themselves admit this doesn't make much sense, but they haven't been able to shake off the influence of traditional thinking that equates a demotion with dishonor.

They recognize the logic that if low scores produce a low handicap, high scores by the same player should give him a high handicap. In Japan, however, only a few clubs have been able to make the wrenching psychological break, and that only recently. There is little to indicate, as yet, that these few cases are the beginning of a nationwide trend.

Japanese treat golf handicaps in much the way they do grades in judo, kendo, shogi (Japanese chess) and other traditional forms of competition in which the grades move only up, never down. One's grade is one's rank.

Rank means much to a Japanese, not only for the effort made to earn it but because it indicates his position in his group. Post-war democracy notwithstanding, Japan remains a vertically structured, group-oriented society.

It is a society in which a person acquires his identity and worth not so much as an individual but through his position, or rank, he holds in his group. Consequently, Japanese reverse rank in a way Westerners do not.

The importance of rank only accentuates the severity of dishonor attached to a demotion. In fact, if a person has served his sport with special distinction, his grade can continue to improve long after he passed his physical prime. One's grade is a medal for meritorious achievement that neither slowed reflexes nor atrophied muscles can take away.

In golf, too, there are times when a club will lower a member's handicap even though his scores have been poor.

This can happen if he should win a tournament. He may have gone around in more strokes than his handicap allows but, because he won, his club's handicap committee will lower him to reward his achievement.

At other times, clubs ignore high scores turned in. Japanese golf clubs do not make it mandatory to turn in scores. As a result, golfers will turn in only good scores for the "honor" of a lower handicap in the knowledge that once they get it, it's good for keeps.

An increased handicap is rarely approved unless out of consideration for age. At one club near Tokyo, a member who had been carrying an impossible 14 for almost 30 years pleaded with his committee for an adjustment because he had passed the age of 80.

The committee upped his handicap to a 19, not because that was what he was now playing to but because that was as far as the committee felt it could go without seeming insulting.

The Japanese approach to handicaps may be incomprehensible to others, but it certainly doesn't detract from the enjoyment they get out of the Royal and Ancient game. After all, that is what really counts.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is an obvious fact that games made by outwitting the opposition count exactly as much as games made by either brute force or brilliant technical execution. As an example of this fact, observe today's deal, whch arose in the 1973 Fall Championships. Sitting in the South seat was one of our nation's top players, Peter Pender, of Sausalito, Calif.

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | Pass | 1 ♡ | 4 ♠ |
| Dbl. | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: King of ♣.

Had West not made his penalty double of Pender's four-spade contract, Pender almost certainly would have gone down a trick. After winning the opening lead with his club ace, he would either (1) have cashed the ace and king of trumps, hoping to fell the queen, or he would (2) have led a heart, to eventually get to dummy via this suit in order to finesse against East for the trump queen.

But West's double changed the complexion of things. West knew that Pender was an excellent player. And Pender knew that West would not have doubled without a sure trump trick. Hence, to attack the trump suit in either of the above-mentioned ways would be a losing play.

Thus it came to pass that Pender, having the courage of his convictions, at trick two led the deuce of trumps towards the board's nine-spot! West, assuming that his partner had either the ace or king (and it might well have been a singleton ace or king), played low. As is evident, dummy's nine captured the trick.

From here in the play was short and sweet for Pender. He next led a club off the board, East putting up his jack. East then returned a club, which South ruffed. The ace and king of trumps now picked up the remaining trumps (including West's queen). Thus Pender's only losers were a club, a diamond, and a heart.

Actually, it is difficult to censure West for his refusal to take his queen of trumps on South's initial trump lead, for it was virtually impossible for him to have diagnosed that Pender was leading a low trump away from his A-K-J. Put yourself in West's position —would you have taken your queen?

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, April 27

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Highlight creativity—accept necessity for change. Emotions dominate—you feel, perceive and detect subtle signals. A relationship is growing more intense. Your appetite is up and down—you have plenty to cope with during this cycle. You could be very much in love.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Highlight basic values, standards. Don't veer too far off course. Being pleasant to someone does not mean you are to give up your own beliefs, personality. Social gathering can result in significant contacts. Gemini, Saggittarius persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on contacts, messages, written material, relatives, short trips. Be aware of fine print, details. Have fun without abdicating responsibilities. You're aided by individual you helped in recent past. Brother or sister could be in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You gain access to information which can prove profitable. Take notes. Check sources. Aid can be received from group, club or special organization. Spotlight is on valuables, terms of lease or agreement—and money.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What had been a money or property "misunderstanding" rights itself. Cycle is such that you are at right place at right time. Personal affairs dominate. Family reunion could be on agenda. You can make contact with one who will play important role in your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Much that occurs is behind the scenes—you could do well by working within organization. Hospital or charitable institution might figure prominently. Remember dream—it could be prophetic. ...You gain access to "secret" information.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on desire, friendship, romantic interests, attainment of goal. Capricorn, Cancer persons could be part of scenario. You regain sense of direction. Your self-esteem returns. Member of opposite sex makes plain that you are needed, attractive, loved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Prestige, creative endeavors are featured. You get rid of what has been a burden. You get chance to see more, to do more, to expand sphere of influence. One with problem asks your aid—this could lead to chain of events very beneficial to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good lunar aspect coincides now with education, publishing communication, long journey, spiritual insight. You make inroads along new paths; your ability to be an innovator shines forth. Love bridges distance — you feel glow and it is real.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dig beneath superficial layers—insist on factual data. Be ready for change, travel, variety, intensified relationship. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. The number "1" comes into play — more than is coincidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on marital status, cooperative efforts, legal affairs, public relations. Leave fine points, details for another time. Now you can perceive potential, can see picture as a whole. Wait. Listen. Observe. Plant seeds, make contacts for future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Low profile gets job done. Accent on details, basic issues, the way you accomplish tasks. Scorpio, Leo persons could figure prominently. One who has been an ally, who shares your interests deserves more than usual attention. Act accordingly.

IF APRIL 27th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dynamic, stubborn, determined. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. July should be your most important month of 1977, a year which highlights new starts, added independence, creative outlets, fresh contacts, a new lease on life. You will be in love—married or single, you will feel that love is in your life and you will celebrate being rid of a terrible burden.

Hydro Seeks $75M in Europe

B.C. Hydro plans to raise $75 million through the issue of bonds on the European market, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Monday.

Wolfe said the issue is being offered for the first time in Europe because of advantageous rates, estimated at 7.75 per cent annually, and to develop another source of financing for Hydro.

Application has been made to the Council of the Stock Exchange in London for the bonds to be admitted to the official list.

The "Eurodollar" bond issue is due in 1985 and will be unconditionally guaranteed by the province of B.C.

Wolfe said the bonds won't be offered directly or indirectly in Canada and won't be registered in the United States.

The B.C. Hydro and Power Authority Amendment Act, passed in the spring session of the legislature, increased Hydro's borrowing power by $650 million to $4.1 billion.

FBI Head Stays

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — FBI Director Clarence Kelley was urged last week by subordinates to resign in protest against criminal charges being brought against a retired agent but he refused to do so, informed sources said Monday. The U.S. justice department has been investigating allegedly unlawful tactics used by the bureau in the past. Kelley has said the inquiry has hurt FBI morale.

Mill Rate Rise To Aid Arena

The provincial cabinet has approved an adjustment to the mill rate ceiling for the Sooke area to allow the ice arena to remain open past May.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser, acting on behalf of Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis, said Monday cabinet will allow the mill rate for the Sooke electoral area of the Capital Region District to rise from 1.75 mills to 2.75 mills.

Fraser said slow growth in the assessment base of the Sooke area and unanticipated operating costs of the Sooke arena had threatened to close the arena by the end of May if the mill rate was not adjusted to provide additional operating funds.

Provincial approval for the mill rate increase is valid only until the end of 1977. Any subsequent requests for adjustments would have to be voted on in the Sooke district.

Court Rules Chairman Appointed

Mr. Justice W. A. Craig of the B.C. Supreme Court has been appointed chairman of the permanent advisory committee reviewing rules of the court.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Monday that while the rules appear to be working well, the committee will watch them and advise the attorney-general when changes are necessary.

Other members of the committee include Supreme Court registrar T. J. Halbert; Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon, and lawyers Rodney Taylor of Victoria and Robert Guile of Vancouver, both nominees of the Canadian Bar Association.

Summer Camp Data Available

Parents of boys 8 years and older interested in a challenging summer camp are invited to meet Geoff Tisch of the Educo School of B.C. at the Hillside mall this week.

Educo, from the Latin "to draw forth" offers boys "challenging opportunities to release their creative potential" at its outdoor adventure camp near 110-Mile House in the Cariboo. It is a non-profit organization.

In addition to the display in the mall, there will be a lecture and film in Room 163 of the Cornett Building, University of Victoria, at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The summer sessions, which cost from $200 for juniors and intermediates to $400 for seniors, teaches mountaineering, canoeing, and outdoor survival including three days and two nights alone in the wilderness with nothing but a knife, sleeping bag, plastic sheet, piece of string and matches.

ANN-MARGRET . . . boundless energy

Ann-Margret Feeling Frisky At the Top

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
Washington Post

Ann-Margret, the pretty woman without a last name (professionally) burst upon the entertainment world at the Motion Picture Academy Awards in 1961.

She sang Bachelor in Paradise, finished with a wink and left about 40 million persons asking "Who was that girl?"

Sixteen years, 25 motion pictures and dozens of television specials later, "that girl" is firmly established as a multi-media star who gets top dollar at Las Vegas and who works all the time.

"That girl" has survived a face-shattering accident in Las Vegas and was put back together by plastic surgeons and will be starring this week as Ann-Margret . . . Rhinestone Cowgirl tonight.

She's part of an NBC All Specials Night that begins with Chuck Barris and The Gong Show . . . Why? and ends with Mac Davis and Sounds Like Home.

I caught up with Ann-Margret by telephone during one of her brief stays in Los Angeles. "We were home one month in 1976. The cats and dogs are here more than we are."

The "we" refers to her husband and executive producer Roger Smith, the sometime actor of such TV series as "77 Sunset Strip" and "Mr. Roberts," who now devotes full time to the career of Ann-Margret.

He runs the career with a firm hand.

"No, I'm not riding the motorcycles any more," said Ann-Margret Olson Smith. "I had too many accidents and Roger has grounded me for a full year."

Were the accidents caused by the residuals of the accident five years ago in Las Vegas, when Ann-Margret plunged off a stage and into the orchestra pit?

"No, I'm mostly over that. About the only thing left is that when I grow tired my right hand has a tremor I just switch the microphone to my left hand and keep going. The doctors told me to expect that; but otherwise I feel frisky."

She must be full of energy.

She has two unreleased movies that were done last year in Europe. She worked for five months in Spain and Ireland on a film called The Last Re-Make of 'Beau Geste,' which she describes as "zany, crazy, insane" and she worked for three months in England on the film version of Henry Fielding's 18th century novel, Joseph Andrews.

For tonight's special Ann-Margret went to the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn. The ever-protective Roger Smith — who knows that almost no performer can carry an hour of television entertainment in today's competition — surrounded her with notable guests.

They are Bob Hope, Perry Como, Minnie Pearl and Guitarist Chet Atkins. "We had fun," said Ann-Margret, "and I think that it shows on the tape."

The taping was done "live, on tape" over a three-day period and before an audience of 4,500.

It was also done amid some wicked attempts by the performers trying devilishly to break up each other with unexpected activity and ad lib remarks.

For example, Ann-Margret was on stage during a rehearsal.

Behind her, pushing a broom and wearing blue-and-white sneakers, appeared Perry Como. Only after he was spotted by Ann-Margret did Como embrace her and announce: "Ladies and gentlemen, that's a girl!"

After a long, meaningful Perry Como-style pause, he added: "I've worked with a lot of girls but she is ridiculous! One of the sweetest, nicest girls. What you see is what she is."

Como, knowing that Bob Hope can never resist an ad lib, went to writer Buz Kohan in advance of a skit with Hope and asked for comedy lines. Later, with Hope and Como in out-sized overalls, checked shirts and funny hats, Hope dropped a crack about Como's appearance.

Como had a reply quip (which is on the tape) and had the pleasure of watching Bob Hope break up.

Comedy aside, the show's major production number is a salute to American composure Aaron Copland. Ann-Margret and her dancers perform to some of Copland's ballet music, including segments from Rodeo, Billy the Kid and Appalachian Spring.

BRANDO TURNING TO RED ROOTS

LONDON — Actor Marlon Brando is seeking foreign aid to produce a 13-part television series that would do for American Indians what Roots did for black Americans.

He announced his plans Monday at a news conference at which he spent most of his time criticizing the United States for its treatment of Indians.

The white-haired, 53-year-old Brando criticized President Carter for basing his foreign policy on human rights "while they (the Indians) suffer every day of their lives, persecuted, poor and hungry in the richest country in the world."

He also accused Amnesty International — the London-based human rights organization — of ignoring the Indians' plight because it is financed by U.S. interests.

The actor, who refused an Oscar award in protest over the Indian issue and made a gift of most of his land in Los Angeles to the Indians, accused Washington of "murdering, torturing and starving" the Indians.

Love Cited As Motive For Theft

FRANKFURT — A 37-year-old East German said Monday he masterminded an art theft in East Germany to ransom the paintings for his girlfriend's freedom to leave the country.

Bernard Wuchold, an interior decorator who came to West Germany last May, is charged with hiring two Turks who allegedly broke into the Sanssouci art gallery near Potsdam last Jan. 29 and stole 10 paintings.

The paintings, valued at $416,660, were later smuggled into West Germany where police recovered them.

"I wanted to force the East German government to permit my fiancee and 13 other persons to leave the country," Wuchold told the court on the opening day of his trial.

Sharing the defendants' bench with Wuchold were the two Turks, six other West Germans and one Hungarian.

ABC Pulling the Plug On the Bionic Woman

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — After five seasons, Streets of San Francisco was cancelled Monday by ABC-TV, which also cancelled Bionic Woman, Most Wanted, Dog and Cat, Blansky's Beauties and The Tony Randall Show.

The network also said it is cancelling its Captain and Tennille and Brady Bunch variety shows as weekly series, but that each will be on the air next season as occasional specials.

The ABC cancellations came as the network — No. 1 in ratings averages for this season — became the first of the three networks to make public its evening program schedule for the 1977-78 season.

NBC said its fall program lineup will be made public the first week in May, while CBS says its 1977-78 schedule will be out May 6.

ABC said next fall it will have six new series on the air, among them a weekly one-hour variety show Thursdays starring Redd Foxx, who is leaving NBC's Sanford and Son series this season.

The five other new series all are comedies. They are:

—San Pedro Bums, a one-hour series about five high-spirited young men living in the seaport town of San Pedro, Calif.

—Love Boat, a one-hour show starring Gavin McLeod, formerly a co-star of CBS' Mary Tyler Moore Show. He now will play the captain of a luxury liner.

—Soap, a half-hour series about two families whose "relationships are as complex as those in a Russian novel," says ABC.

—Operation Petticoat, a situation comedy based on the 1959 Cary Grant movie about a Second World War submarine skipper who rescues a group of U.S. Army nurses. John Astin plays the skipper in the new series.

ABC also said one of the special programs it plans to air next season is a 12-hour mini-series, Washington.

It says the show is loosely based on The Company — the novel by John Ehrlichman, the former White House aide who was convicted on Watergate cover-up charges in 1975.

Charge Guards for Riot, Urges Inmate

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A B.C. Penitentiary prisoner said in provincial court Monday he pleaded guilty to three charges arising from a hostage-taking incident because he feels he can never get a fair trial in Canada.

"I have come to realize the futility of preparing a proper defence," Thomas Shand told Judge J. K. Shaw.

Shand, appearing for sentencing with four other prisoners, said in a prepared statement he read from the dock that the prisoners felt that all they could receive at a trial would be ridicule and degradation.

Shand, 37, serving a life sentence, said prison authorities are as much to blame for last September's hostage-taking as the prisoners.

He said the authorities should stand trial for inciting the riot.

"The courts and the people who make the laws in Canada are more criminal that the people they send to prison," Shand said.

He accused guards of purposely creating riots and hostage-takings to push demands for higher pay and more security.

The guards at the penitentiary are playing at "blackmail, where the message is give us what we want or we'll let the animals loose," he said.

"The only winners in today's prisons are the guards, who get higher pay, and the outside contractors, who build more slaughterhouses," he said.

Shand, John Gagnon, John Rose, Richard Rye and Ralph Saumer pleaded guilty last week to two counts each of unlawful confinement and one count each of possessing a dangerous weapon.

Rose, Gagnon and Saumer were given three-year concurrent terms on each count while Rye, who was due for release next January, was given one-year concurrent terms for each count.

Peter Labuik, also charged in the hostage-taking, pleaded guilty earlier and was sentenced in February to five years concurrent on each count.

The charges arose from a riot which broke out at the penitentiary Sept. 27, and spread into a 3½-day rampage in which 200 prisoners destroyed the penitentiary's east wing.

Kitchen worker Walter Day was taken hostage but released after 25 hours. Guard Wayne Culbert was held throughout the riot.

Shand said the prisoners should have been locked in their cells when the trouble began. The fact that they were not locked up indicates that authorities wanted the riot to spread.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Robert George Gibb, of 271 Cadillac, is charged in the March 24 stabbing death of 26-year-old Leonard Arthur Bradley Zink, of 2994 Phyllis, in the Bastion Inn beer parlor.

There is a no-publication order involving the evidence of the preliminary hearing.

★ ★ ★

Two men were charged with assault with intent to steal in connection with a holdup attempt of a taxi driver Friday night in Colwood.

Brian Gordon Bain, 19, from Haney, and Dale Kenneth Parker, 20, of no fixed address, were charged in an incident in which 27-year-old Gurnam Bajwa escaped after a leather choker was used around his neck.

Bain was released following a bail hearing while Parker was held in custody until Wednesday, when a bail application is expected. Both will re-appear in court next Monday for election of trial method.

★ ★ ★

Huston Alexander Henderson, 17, of 1731 Albert Ave. was charged with breaking and entering and remanded until next Monday for election.

Henderson is charged in connection with a Saturday morning break-in at the Royal Canadian Legion, 622 Admirals Road, in which a man allegedly knocked himself unconscious running into a closet.

A man who objected to a condition for his release on bail was heard screaming in the halls of the provincial court building and adjacent Victoria city police station Monday afternoon.

Michael Martin Connon, 40, of 1225 Tolmie, was charged with mischief by wilfully obstructing women in the use of the European Health Spa, 1570 Hillside, by standing in the nude.

Defence lawyer Paul Jarman asked that the case be remanded until Friday for plea at that time, and indicated he would not oppose a condition asked for by Crown counsel Robert Mulligan in connection with Connon's release.

Mulligan asked that Connon be ordered not to go near the health spa while the matter was being resolved and Allan included the condition in his release order.

Connon voiced his disapproval and, after a short adjournment, instructed his counsel to oppose the condition.

A bail hearing was held and Allan affirmed his earlier decision.

In the afternoon, Connon apparently refused to sign the undertaking to appear because of the condition and, as he was being led to the jail area through the court building, began shouting, causing at least one court to take a quick adjournment to allow the noise to die down.

★ ★ ★

The judge was speaking to 18-year-old Wesley Glenn Arden, who pleaded guilty to mischief to commit a wilful act likely to cause danger to life.

Arden admitted that he and some companions on April 9 placed a log across the roadway in the 200-block Niagara Street in James Bay at about 11:40 p.m.

The youth was handed a suspended sentence and ordered to perform 35 hours of community service work.

A 28-year-old man was fined a total of $200 after pleading guilty to two charges laid under the Immigration Act.

Kashmir Singh Dial, who was a Victoria resident, pleaded guilty to remaining unlawfully in Canada after his visitor's visa ran out Sept. 30, and working without a valid employment visa.

Court was told Dial was selling oysters and clams when he was arrested on Thetis Island.

Allan, who fined the man $100 on each count, pointed out that the immigration branch wouldn't have given Dial a working permit anyway, but charged him with working without one.

Allan imposed smaller-than-usual fines on a 41-year-old man after learning that the man was supporting two teenaged boys on unemployment insurance benefits.

Kenneth Roy Wilson, of 1714 Newton, pleaded guilty to two counts of having blood-alcohol contents over .08 per cent and was fined $400 on the first and $50 on the second. In addition to the $50 fine, Wilson was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Mulligan told the court Wilson was arrested Nov. 15 after Esquimalt police noticed his erratic driving in the 1400-block Esquimalt Road. His breath test reading was .25, Mulligan said.

On Dec. 31, Wilson was involved in a motor vehicle accident in a service station lot in the 2100-block Quadra, and a subsequent breath test produced a .13 reading, court was informed.

"Sooner or later you're going to kill somebody, there's just no question about that," Allan said, referring to the .25 reading.

Defence lawyer Michael O'Connor asked for the lenient treatment because his client had custody of boys aged 13 and 15 and had been raising them for seven years.

A man who tried to turn his car keys over to a police officer whose car he had just hit was fined $350 after pleading guilty to having a blood-alcohol content over .08.

John Richard Lasell, 28, of 570 Kenneth, was fined after court was told that at 2:35 a.m. April 15 he drove up to the Victoria city police station to turn in his keys because he felt he was too drunk to drive.

After Lasell informed Sgt. Lorne Johnson that there was a slight problem parking and a truck had been damaged, the desk sergeant went out and found it was his truck.

Also fined for having blood-alcohol contents over .08 were Gordon Scott Pellow, 18, of 2425 Dryfe, $350; and Robert Stephen McGimpsey, 27, of 5026 Lochside Drive, $200. In addition, McGimpsey was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Amy's a Trend Setter with Her Hideout

Timothy Anderson, in his own place

family

Amy Carter, who has a perfectly nice White House to sleep in, recently shinnied five feet up a cedar on the South Lawn and spent the night in her new tree house.

Now, the only other witnesses to this historic sleepover were a pal of the president's nine-year-old daughter, her nursemaid and her dog, Grits. But since the architect of the tree house happens to be the president of the United States, the news swept U.S. backyards faster than Tarzan on a vine.

Soon the White House phones were ringing with calls from parents seeking presidential tree house plans.

"They say, 'My kid wants an Amy Carter Tree House. How do you build it?'" a spokesman reports, chuckling at the idea. "It's really a very, very basic structure."

Indeed, it might be called a primitive structure when compared with the split-levels, the triangles, the domes and other exotica now nesting in tree-tops around the city's suburbs.

There, among the branches, sit dwellings whose exteriors resemble forts or boats or airplanes, whose interiors offer all the creature comforts. Some come with carpets, electricity and plumbing. Some have telephones, televisions, stereos, even devices that permit the tree-house tenant to send out for supper from the main house.

But many others are as humble as the Amy Carter model. What Amy has is a basic sandbox-in-the-sky, no grander than last year's favorite structure — a lemonade stand. What Amy has is not a true tree house, in view of some purists, since it is on four posts rather than on the 40-foot cedar.

To reach it, Amy climbs along the branches as does her father when he visits from the Oval Office nearby. "He climbed up here once," she told reporters in a recent treeside interview.

What is Amy's idea of fun aloft? Reading — she's taking a speed-reading course — and sleeping over. "I stayed out here one night," she said. "It was fun."

"Looking down on things, that's fun," said Stefan Harshman, 11, whose tree house does not have a view of the Washington Monument and the Jefferson Memorial, as Amy's does. "I feel better than I normally do on the ground," he said. "Like a king, above everything."

He reigns from a leafy fort in East Hampton, N.Y. It was built by Stefan and three buddies with wood scrounged from neighbors and the local dump and it hovers 25 feet over his backyard.

Speaking from somewhat lower level in Roslyn Heights, N.Y., a seven-year-old named Dan tells of playing Star Trek with friends in his tree house, a snazzy custom job with a peaked roof.

"There's a lot of fresh air up here and you don't have any furniture to get in the way of you," Dan says solemnly.

Douglas Murphy, 13, has nothing against furniture — the colorful, plastic sort that can be inflated in his Bronxville, N.Y., retreat. His idea of fun up there is "reading, playing games and stuff." Once it was "having mud-bomb wars," but that was three years ago.

Still, Douglas's tree house retains its wartime trappings and its name: The Battle Place. A green boat-shaped affair, it flies a military flag and sports a rope pulley, decorated with Christmas lights, in season.

In summer, the pulley carries necessities back and forth from the Murphy home. "Sometimes food, sometimes a television or sleeping bags, if we decide to sleep out," says Douglas. "It sleeps five."

Sleepovers seem to be the most popular tree-house activity. But there are also leapovers, the idea being to heap leaves around the house and leap down into them, sending parents into cardiac arrest. Then, too, there are the eternal battles against the gang from the rival tree house and the sporadic quiet moments spent watching birds or spying on grownups.

"The fact that a chilk picks a tree to build in, rather than building on the ground, suggests that the tree means something special to him," says David Stiles, a designer whose business is called The Children's Architect.

The appeal of the tree lies in the fact that "it keeps growing and moving," he says. "Each generation of kids gets into the tree house and remodels it. Often, the older kids will hand it down to the younger ones with great secret rituals."

Tree House Tips

The following hints for the building of better tree houses come from David Stiles.

1. Pick a tree with a diameter of at least six inches. Then, let its form suggest your design. Don't make a plan and try to find a tree to fit it.
2. Take advantage of the tree's natural supports. Select forked branches for braces.
3. Make your first platform within arm's reach of the ground or of a step ladder.
4. Use only galvanized nails, bolts and other fasteners. Use steel cables and synthetic, not manila, rope.
5. Never girdle the tree or cut off its bark all the way around, as this will kill the tree.

DOCTORS GET SICK, TOO

Dear Miss E.:

That's a fine trap you've set for me. My confessional to you would have to reveal how careless I am, and I'm sure many other doctors are, about their own health.

The yearly examinations we recommend to our patients are overlooked far too often by many of us in the practice of medicine.

Should a doctor sneeze or cough while examining a patient almost invariably he'll hear the facetious comment, "I'll refer you to a good doctor!" Or, "Doctor, you shouldn't be sick. After all, you know how to take care of yourself."

Actually, doctors are heir to all of the same physical and emotional problems that affect their patients. There is no greater fallacy than the belief that doctors are not vulnerable simply because they have a medical degree.

I should add, in defence of the neglect by a doctor of his own health, that he is able to evaluate many symptoms as they arise and solve them himself.

Related to your question and my answer lies an important aspect of the relationship between doctors and their patients. Patients must realize that doctors do get sick. They do have emotionally trying situations within the framework of their home and family. They are burdened by all of the psychological and social pressures of modern society. An understanding of this may make patients realize that the doctor cannot always be the Rock of Gibraltar at all hours of the day or night.

Even the most patient and good-humored doctor will have an alteration of personality if outside pressures become burdensome. Mutual appreciation of each other's occasional inconsistencies helps to solidify this important relationship. Now, Miss E., I want to thank you for reminding me to set up an appointment for my annual physical!

Dear Mr. L.:

The most popular substitute for aspirin is the drug acetaminophen. It is generally accepted to be safe and useful as a pain reliever. This drug, like any other drug taken in large quantities, can be dangerous and can do damage to some of the vital organs of the body, especially the liver.

POOR LOSE TO AGED IN HOUSING ISSUES

OTTAWA (CP) — The housing programs of many municipalities discriminate against poor families, whether headed by one or two parents, says Albert Rose, dean of the University of Toronto faculty of social work.

Rose told conference on family policy Monday that elected and appointed officials in local government find it much safer to devote their energies to the increasing elderly population.

"Such persons are uniformily grateful, do not have children, cause very few problems of operation and management, pay their rent on time and are rarely engaged in vandalism or other anathemas for public housing management," he said.

Rose said there are about 150,000 publicly-provided housing units in Canada compared with about 500,000 one-parent families, most of which have incomes low enough to meet any criteria for housing assistance.

Rose said municipal officials are "both prejudiced and-or frightened of the problems which might arise if they were to initiate substantial construction of assisted housing for low-income families."

Robert Couchman, executive director of the Family Services Association of Metropolitan Toronto, said the proposed federal Social Services Act "has the potential to encourage the development of a full range of family-oriented personal social services."

But, he warned, because the legislation leaves a lot of decisions to the provinces, "the likelihood of an irrational patchwork system of family services being developed by most provinces is extremely high.

In a speech Sunday, Andrew Armitage of the University of Calgary faculty of social welfare said there is no coherent Canadian family policy — "more the result of inattention than conviction."

Armitage said more attention should be paid to using the family to fight social problems by providing day care and home-makers services so women can work and better the financial situations of their families, and expansion of family counselling services "to support families, not to displace their social roles by bureaucratic systems."

The three-day conference, sponsored by the Canadian Council on Social Development, ends today.

After years of wearing eyeglasses, you can accumulate quite a few pairs of old ones with lenses that no longer suit your vision. Consider having a pair of the old frames filled with sun-shading lenses. You don't need a prescription; many opticians have equipment to "read" your present prescribed lenses.

A rented safety deposit box isn't the best place to store all important personal papers. In case of death of the renter, only the will and a deed may be removed, according to some laws. That doesn't include life insurance policies, which are needed as soon after death as possible.

Yucca Plant May Help Arthritics

The spiny yucca plant—used for centuries as a staple food for Indians of the southwestern U.S.—may offer hope for the 20 million North Americans who suffer from some form of arthritis.

At least, that seems to be the bottom line of a study conducted by California physicians Robert Bingham and Bernard A. Bellew (and reported in "The Journal of Applied Nutrition," Vol. 27, No. 2).

In the Bingham-Bellew study, 165 arthritis victims—aged 11 to 92—were given from two to eight yucca extract tablets per day for up to five months. A control group of 51 patients received placebos, or non-medicinal tablets. None of the patients who participated in the study knew which kind of pills—yucca or placebo—he-she was receiving.

The results: 49 per cent of the patients who'd taken yucca tablets felt that the pills had had an over all beneficial effect on their symptoms. By contrast, only 21 per cent of the patients who got placebos reported any improvement on their condition.

Perhaps more strikingly, 60 per cent of all patients receiving yucca extract said that they felt less swelling, pain, and stiffness after trying the pills. And more than 90 per cent of these people—when asked—said that they'd noticed no unpleasant effects stemming from their "yucca therapy."

Dr. Bingham—who has treated well over 1,000 patients with yucca pills during the past two years—says that persons who suffer gastrointestinal disturbances with their arthritis seem to derive the greatest benefit from yucca therapy.

He adds: "The pills seem to be useful also in treating some patients who have had chronic headaches in connection with joint discomfort."

How does yucca extract act to alleviate some of the symptoms of arthritis? No one knows. In fact, there's no reason why yucca saponin (the substance of which the yucca pills are made) should exert any direct effect on the human body, since it's not absorbed into the bloodstream.

Drs. Bingham and Bellew, however, suggest that the substance probably brings about relief indirectly, by reducing (or otherwise altering) the production of toxins in the intestinal tract.

The two California physicians make no claims that yucca pills can "cure" arthritis . . . nor do they say that most people who try the tablets can expect relief from arthitis symptoms. This is only reasonable. There are more than a hundred forms of the disease we call arthritis," and it'd be unrealistic—to say the least—to think that any single medicine could produce a panacea-like cure for the condition.

One thing's certain: it can't hurt a person to try yucca tablets. According to Dr. Bingham, there's virtually no danger of allergic reactions (or conflicts between yucca and other medications) arising, since the pills' main ingredient is never actually absorbed into the body.

More research will, of course, be needed before anyone knows for sure just how valuable a medicine yucca saponin is. For now, suffice it to say that the substance has—at least in some cases—proven effective as an arthritis remedy . . . and that the desert yucca—valued by Indian cultures for many centuries—may soon prove just as useful to modern medical science.

Alcoholism Physical, Not Emotional: Prof.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Purdue University research team has preliminary laboratory evidence hinting that alcoholism may be due to a physical problem instead of psychological or social factors.

Dr. Robert D. Myers reported finding a substance which appears to promote excessive drinking by rats when injected into the animals' brains. The substance is a normal product of the human metabolic processes which break down alcohol in the body.

Myers suggested Friday the alcoholic may differ from other people in that some cellular defect may cause an abnormal formation of the substance in his brain.

The cause of alcoholism is unknown, but some specialists believe personality, cultural and social factors are key elements. Myers said he believes this is the first evidence of a neurochemical basis for the disorder.

"I think the fact is this is the first time anyone has been able to induce in an animal that ordinarily despises alcohol for the most part to actively seek it out and drink it. If that's the case, the analogy would hold for the human," Myers said in a telephone interview.

The work was reported, in the April 29 issue of Science, Journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which was released Friday. Myers, who conducted the research with Dr. Christine Melchoir, said the substance in question is tetrahydropapaveroline (THP). He said it apparently is formed in the liver and is closely related to morphine which suggests the mechanisms underlying addiction to both morphine and alcohol could have some common feature. If the finding is confirmed by further research, Myers said it theoretically is possible continued research might some day produce a drug which could block or counteract the effects of the substance and thus cure alcoholism.

Another implication of the finding, if confirmed by further studies, is that an alcoholic's addiction is fueled by the alcohol he drinks. That would mean the only immediate hope for a recovered alcoholic to avoid relapse is total abstinence.

MADRID (Reuter) — The Spanish national airline Iberia cancelled all its flights — both domestic and international — late Monday after its ground personnel went on strike to back wage demands. An Iberia spokesman said he does not know how long the planes would be grounded.

DOLLAR COINS NOT PRODUCED

OTTAWA (CP) — The mint will not strike any 1977 dollar coins for distribution through the banks until stocks of 1976 dollars are exhausted, Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer said Monday in the Commons.

Replying to Robert McKinley (PC — Heron-Middlesex), Goyer raised the possibility that no more dollar coins, except those in collector sets, may be struck until 1978.

OFF THE WALL

Louise DeGrave

Tax time always revitalizes my never-ending quest for the comfortable but low-tax-bracket style of life that I'm convinced exists somewhere. (Ralph calls it the Have-Your-Cake-and-Eat-It-Too School of Economics.)

Actually, the quest is all for future reference as we've never had to pay much in taxes. Ralph was a perennial student until two years ago and I could consistently be counted upon to be among the ranks of the insufficiently paid.

Last year, when things might have begun to change, we aquired a phenomenal medical deduction. (The only advantage I've really found to brain surgery is that you don't pay taxes that year.)

But some of our slightly older friends have been warning us for some time that our days of student rates at the movie theatre are numbered and that at some point we may have to think about something called a tax shelter.

Ralph's friend Murray knows a lot about tax shelters. "Ask not if you need it or want it," says Murray, "if it's tax deductible, buy it." Ralph is in the same business as Murray so every time we come over, Murray writes off the cost of two Diet Pepsis and a bag of sunflower seeds (salted).

"My basic feeling about it is," I said to Ralph, "that if we ever get into the unlikely position of having to worry about tax shelters, I'd rather you didn't knock yourself out earning the money in the first place." It's not sound economic policy, I know. But my priority to spend my energy supervising investments is somewhere just below cleaning the cat litter box. (I'm heavily into simplicity.)

"You could just take off more time and we could walk hand in hand through fields full of wild flowers," I suggested.

"I don't want to disillusion you," said Ralph, "but for the past three years, you have been living in an urban area. There ARE no fields full of wild flowers."

(Ralph has never been a romantic.)

★ ★ ★

The axe, of course, fell last week when we visited our friendly accountant.

"I don't know how to break it to you two," he said, "but it looks like you are going to have to pay taxes at the end of this year unless you can come up with another extraordinary expense."

"Maybe we can have Ralph's brain done this year," I said.

Ralph, however, was in favor of more traditional investments. (Plastic coffins, or 2,000 head of cattle who turn out to have hoof and mouth disease.)

"Maybe," said Ralph, "we could incorporate." We have several other self-employed friends who have cut their tax bills by incorporating. The husband becomes the president of the corporation, the wife the vice-president, and their two lhasa apsos are secretary and treasurer. (You have no idea what it's like going to a baby shower full of corporate vice-presidents.)

"There must be some precisely right income for us," I said to our accountant, "where we could live moderately comfortably but not have to hand over half our income to taxes."

"If you find it," he said, "let me know."

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: My beautiful creeping Charley has been simply blooming its sweet little old heart out all summer. However, the blossoms are falling off now and I don't know what to do with all the long unclad branches. Should they be trimmed back or left alone? I really don't know how to properly care for old Charley, but I must be doing something right. He was just three small two-inch plants when I potted him, and now he is a bushy 2½ feet tall.

I would appreciate any tips you might have for helping Charley enjoy a long and healthy life. — J.K.

DEAR J.K.: We recommend pinching off the flowers as they appear because they sap energy from the stems and leaves and the result is what you're now experiencing.

Charley needs good indirect light and watering on a schedule that doesn't allow the plant to get dry. Frequent pinching back of new leaves also helps develop a full bushy plant. They grow quickly and are attracted to the light, so rotate the plant to the light for even distribution.

Love and devotion are most important in the realization of a beautiful plant experience, so you should enjoy yours to the fullest.

In many areas the natural gas supply is rapidly diminishing. The very thing that was taken for granted and wasted suddenly becomes precious. Water is in short supply because of drought, not only in the United States but in other parts of the world as well. The lack of rainfall affects our life on the very bottom line — survival — for without water there can be no life. Our plants need water for their survival, and we need our plants — whether they be food for our stomach or food for our soul.

Certain houseplants can be grown without much water: cactus and succulents are ideal, Chinese evergreens, dracaenas, philodendrons like to be grown on the dry side. Since most people overwater their plants, perhaps this water shortage can be a blessing in disguise.

We can learn lessons from each experience that comes our way. Rather than worrying about things, understand their significance and take positive action. Let's all take a look at how we waste nature's precious gifts and take steps to conserve.

Homemakers' Recognition Sought

CALGARY (CP) — The National Council of Women, representing 44 Canadian councils, is fighting for recognition of the homemaker and her contribution to the national economy, says Ruth Hinkley, council president.

"We will be asking for women to be included in their own right in the Canada Pension Plan," she told the Calgary local.

"We feel women should pay into the plan on their own and have full rights to a pension.

"In the meantime, we do support the splitting concept in which the CPP credits are devided between a husband and wife who separate. National council also supports a guaranteed minimum income . . ."

The national council is one of eight national groups to present a brief to the government each year.

She said the council's main role is researching social problems and making recommendations go government, adding that socia change comes slowly.

"I'm sure some women must feel rather remote from council," Hinkley said.

"They can see immediate results from many local projects in which they're involved."

She praised the city local for work it did on the young offenders' bill which will be presented in the form of a resolution at the annual meeting in Ottawa in June.

The council resolved that co-operation of the provinces be sought to establish a uniform age category — with 12 years of age set as the minimum and attainment of the 18th birthday as the maximum age for juvenile offenders.

The council also asked for recognition of cultural as well as religious differences be given in placing native and other children in foster care.

ENOUGH TO MAKE YOUR HAIR CURL

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The entertainment at Applegate's barber shop will make your hair curl.

Instead of outdated magazines, patrons are entertained by girls doing exotic, belly and disco dancing. And they can sip on a drink while getting a shampoo and head and shoulder massage.

George Applegate, 37, owner of the hair salon for men, said he got tired of hearing customers complain about having nothing to do while getting a haircut except read old magazines.

So he got union and state permission to offer live dancing.

Besides a one-time $50 initiation fee and $25 a year, customers pay from $15.50 to $20.50 to get clipped.

Patrons get shorn in private booths that face a small stage and the dancers, "never fully unclothed," rotate throughout the day so that repeat customers don't see the same performance.

Just as you watch your food budget by careful marketing, you can reduce your fuel bills by careful use of your electrical appliances.

The 12-page booklet Saving Energy And Dollars states that more than half your energy costs come from heating and cooling your home and tells you how you can save fuel in these areas.

The booklet is brim full with helpful advice. For instance, if you want a lot of light, remember that one large bulb is better than several smaller ones. A 100-watt bulb gives you more light than two 60-watt ones. It is also worth knowing that instant-on television sets use energy even when they are not in use. Therefore, you can save money if you unplug them whenever you go out of town for a few days.

For example, an electric clock uses 22 kilowatt hours (kwh) per year and a dishwasher, if used almost every day, 363 kwh. A 15 cu. ft. frostless freezer uses 1,761 kwh per year and a vacuum cleaner which is used every five days consumes 103 kwh. A toaster used twice a day needs 39 kwh of electricity per year while a color TV used about seven hours per day uses 550 kwh per year, compared with 236 kwh for a black-and-white set.

Constipation is frequently referred to as irregularity. However, according to the six-page folder The Laxative Habit — missing a bowel movement for a few days won't do you any harm.

The folder explains that if you take a laxative too often, you my eventually have to rely entirely on medication to produce a bowel movement. Furthermore, the continued use of a harsh laxative may cause cramps, diarrhea and even mask the symptoms of a serious illness.

Additionally, you will learn that there are four types of laxatives on the market. These are stimulants, saline laxatives, bulk-forming laxatives and lubricants.

You will find a warning not to take a laxative if you have abdominal pains, nausea, vomiting or a colic. Pregnant women should avoid laxatives, unless they are prescribed by their doctor.

The folder offers one final piece of advice: When you take a laxative, be sure to follow directions. Some products should be dissolved in water before you take them; others should be taken dry and followed by a glass of water. Some are to be taken at bedtime and others in the morning.

Avoid getting used to laxatives and consult your doctor if your symptoms persist!

She Wouldn't What?

DEAR ABBY: You recently ran a letter from a woman who said she lost her 74-year-old boyfriend whom she had gone with for eight years because she refused to "commit adultery" by having sex with him.

She said, "I'm about his age, but to me, adultery is adultery whether you're 16 or 70."

Abby, if this woman had agreed to have sex with her boyfriend, she would NOT be committing adultery! Adultery can be committed only by a married person who has sex with someone other than his (or her) spouse!

Since neither she nor her boyfriend is married, there is no adultery involved here. However, if they did have sex, they would be guilty of fornication, the definition of "fornication" being having sex without marriage.

So please tell that lady immediately that she would not be committing adultery if she had sex with her friend. Knowing this, she might change her mind.—HELPFUL READER

DEAR HELPFUL: A woman wh refuses to commit adultery would probably also refuse to commit fornication, although on a scale of 1 to 10 (10 being the worst), I'd give adultery a 10 and fornication a 9.

DEAR ABBY: I would like a straight answer. In order for a person to get places in this world, is it WHAT you know or WHO you know? — D. C.

DEAR D. C.: It's neither. It's WHOM you know.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the mother who wrote: "I just found out that my 18-year-old daghter is on the Pill, and I am nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame."

I am another Ohio mother who is also nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame because my 18-year-old daughter was NOT on the Pill. Now, I wish with all my heart that she had been because she is now seven months pregnant. Soon she will give birth to her first baby (my first grandchild)—and it will be put up for adoption.

Because of circumstances I can't go into here, my daughter has decided that adoption is the best solution for all concerned, and there is nothing I can do to change her mind.

At least the girl who's on the Pill will never have to live with the guilt of having given up her own flesh and blood. She won't have to miss those Friday night dances, football games, movies and dates with all her friends. She won't have to worry about going back to school to face her classmates who know why she missed six months of school. And her reputation won't be ruined.

Please, mother, don't be upset with your daughter for being on the Pill. Just be grateful that she had sense enough to use birth control instead of risking an unwanted pregnancy. I wish my daughter had. — HEARTBROKEN MOM.

NUMBERS MAKE WINNERS CONSUMER GROUP TOLD

REGINA (CP) — If Canadian consumers are going to bargain, they must be aggressive and organized in large numbers, Saskatchewan Consumer Affairs Minister Ed Whelan said at the weekend.

He told the 30th annual meeting of the Saskatchewan branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada that just belonging to a consumer organization or credit union is not good enough.

"It is necessary to sell memberships to organize the consumer across the country to fight the rising cost of living, to fight the cost of housing, to fight the high cost of food, to remove outrageous profits, to prevent the sale of shoddy goods, to be so big and strong and powerful as a group of consumers that when the federal government decides to sit down and discuss the economic future of this country, it would not ignore us," he said.

Proof of Strawberry in the Eating

Frequent requests are received for the name of a good strawberry to grow in the home garden. To some inquirers the term "good" means a large crop and little work, to others the biggest berries possible, and to the discriminating gardeners a true strawberry flavor similar to the wild berries gathered during childhood regardless of size or quantity.

As these gardeners have discovered, there is a vast difference in the fruits produced by the recognized commercial varieties, several of which have been bred for definite uses.

Since the home gardener is not concerned with appearance for the promotion of sales, but with the flavor at time of eating, recommending commercial varieties is no guarantee of satisfaction.

Royal Sovereign, an English variety, was for years considered the standard against which all other varieties were judged.

Locally, these were eclipsed by the British Sovereign, found in a Chinese acreage on the mainland. It appeared in a planting of Royal Sovereign and was named British Columbia Royal Sovereign later shortened to British Sovereign.

When strawberries were one of the main crops grown on the Saanich Peninsula, this variety dominated all others, but continued growing in the same fields resulted in red stele disease which devastated the crops.

A concentrated breeding program followed in hope of finding a disease resistant variety and many new hybrids were added. These were distributed under the breeding number, a few being given varietal names at a later date.

At the time I was handling planting stock, Puget Beauty was considered outstanding for the home garden although not widely grown commercially excepting for roadside stands.

The highly rated commercial varieties have certain attributes; early cropping to catch the highest prices; eye appeal to induce the customer to buy; size to give the impression of a lot for the money; and the bulk of the crop ready to pick at one time to reduce the cost of labor.

None of these attributes are of any great concern to the home gardener, especially that of having the whole crop ready at one time unless one concentrates on canning or freezing. Flavor is more important and perhaps the reason so many gardeners devote a large portion of the vegetable garden to strawberries.

But flavor is a personal matter, and each gardener must seek the variety the family considers has the flavor they associate with strawberries.

For a true wild strawberry flavor nothing beats the Swiss alpine berries originally marketed under the name Baron Solemacher; other varieties have been introduced in recent years.

These plants are grown from seed, then planted out in rows for a year. The first fruits are sampled for flavor, the best plants chosen for the bed, and the rest destroyed.

Fruit is held high on 12 to 14 inch stems, berries are small about finger-nail size, but prolific. Texture is dry when eaten straight from the plants, but when picked fully ripe and sprinkled lightly with sugar will have liquid showing after an hour or so at room temperature.

The plants do not make any runners, but multiply by new crowns like a primrose. Division of the plants is possible after three to four years.

Local gardeners have invested hundreds of dollars in the so-called climbing strawberries. To date I have not heard of anyone reaping the prodigious crops said in the advertisements to be produced every year.

This strawberry comes from the south of France on the edge of the Mediterranean and cannot be expected to withstand our normal winter temperatures. Any climbing they manage to do in our cool summers is cut down by the first fall frosts.

NEW HOMES FROM $64,750
A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives —carpeted entry lobbies to most —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
—walk to busline, shops, all schools.
Prices from $64,750 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

Quality Marks Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

First impressions at the end of the Greater Victoria Music Festival opening day were of quality throughout abetted in all categories by particularly astute and constructive adjudications.

The 14-day festival opened Monday at five centres dealing with vocal, piano, speech, Highland dance and accordion.

Two days of folk dance sessions took place last week and resulted in adjudicator Joyce Boorman of the University of Alberta's department of movement education, selecting 22 groups for tonight's honor performance at Central Junior Secondary School. The 7.30 p.m. program will illustrate development in movement and dance at junior and senior levels.

First United Church Fellowship Hall is the scene of morning, afternoon and evening vocal sessions — an area that also boasts one of the greatest increases in entries this year.

Winnipeg adjudicator Phyllis Thomson, a widely known soloist, was pleased with what she heard Monday, ranging from boys under 12 to young adults singing French art songs.

Mrs. Thomson was impressed with the young people who were generally "calm and relaxed and didn't fuss." She thought the songs they had chosen in the folk and art song classes suited them well and were musically performed. She also complimented the young accompanists.

"The value of a festival like this," she said, "is that you come here and hear illustrated the very things your teachers have been talking to you about in the studio."

At the evening vocal session soprano Jane MacKenzie topped two classes — for soprano (senior), and French art song, where she tied with soprano Barbara Eadie.

"Sight-reading is as important as cleaning your teeth — you should do it every morning," Vancouver's Phyllis Schuldt told piano sight-readers who totaled 87 for the day in the official program, ranging from under eight to diploma level.

A helpful and constructive adjudicator, Mrs. Schuldt was enthusiastic about the evening session which was devoted to 20th century music at the diploma level. The 11 entrants provided "a lovely recital," she commented.

"The work revealed a lot of careful preparation — it reflects tremendous credit on the people you've been working with."

Judy Au and Claude McLean tied for first place with 91 and Kelly Charlton was second with 88. Certificates of merit were awarded Dagmar Kilian (87), Cynthia Thomson (86), and Darlene Chow (85).

Speech at Newcombe Auditorium deserved a considerably better audience than it was getting Monday There was a great deal of delightful work both in speech and mime, and lively as well as kindly and pinpointed adjudications from Walter Kaasa, Edmonton actor and Director of Cultural Development for Alberta.

Two days of Highland dance will conclude this afternoon at Victoria High School. The traditionally high standard in this city was evident in the advanced classes of the evening session. Adjudicator is Dell Hill of Edmoneon.

Accordion classes also concluded this afternoon, adjudicated by Calgarian Harold McKenzie.

Recreation Centre Pushes Up Tax Rate

Sidney municipal council Monday passed its 1977 budget setting the mill rate at 48.64 mills — about 9.5 mills higher than last year's.

The biggest bite of the increase is the seven mills that will be assessed for the construction of the new recreation centre currently under construction.

The total budget (including taxation for School District 63) was set at $2,526,373.

Mayor J. D. Leigh said the mill rate for general revenue for Sidney was actually down slightly from 1976.

"I think we're doing fairly well. It's a lot better than I anticipated."

Leigh said even with the one-fifth of a mill reduction, Sidney plans $300,000 in capital works and is buying a new street sweeper.

OAK BAY COUNCIL CUTS MILL RATE 4%

Oak Bay council has reduced the mill rate for this year by more than 4 per cent, passing on to taxpayers as much as it can from a cut in Greater Victoria school board's tax bill.

A bylaw passed Monday night provides for a mill rate of 113.481, down from 117.993 last year.

Aldermen were only able to pass along less than 4 per cent of the 17.16 per cent reduction in the school board's 1976 levy, primarily because of increased spending for parks, sewers, waterworks and hospitals.

Estimated spending for 1977 is $9,863,662, up from the actual expenditure in 1976 of $9,279,300.

C. Saanich Plans Budget Talks

A committee meeting will be held at Central Saanich municipal hall Thursday morning to discuss the municipal budget presented to council Monday night.

The $1.5 million budget, drafted by council's finance and budget committee, shows an increase in the municipal mill rate of 1.126 mills and in the school rate of 1.41 mills.

Mayor Jean Butler said today the budget will be thoroughly reviewed.

"It could be increased or it could be decreased. It's all too early to say," she said.

Reading Labs Urged

Reading laboratories should be established in all the district's junior and senior secondary schools and be open in summer for students who need them, Trustee Daphne Temple said Monday.

She also called on junior schools to reveal the number of Grade 8 students reading at a level below acceptable standards.

She said this is necessary so elementary feeder school programs may be given assistance where necessary.

The labs should be established immediately "so students might become literate instead of illiterate before leaving school," she said in serving notice of motion that will be discussed at the May 9 school board meeting.

Mrs. Temple said teachers should be released from classroom duties to assist in the language laboratories when necessary.

Trustees Adopt Plan for Goals

"This is quite an encouraging document. I didn't realize we were doing so well," trustee Peter Bunn said during discussion of a brief entitled School District Directions.

Other trustees agreed with Bunn's assessment of the report, compiled by schools superintendent Allan Stables.

It outlines policy statements on what the district hopes to achieve, how it proposes to accomplish those goals and how they can be evaluated.

Most of the goals confirm the district's support of the provincial government's core curriculum program to develop students' basic skills to deal not only with further education, but with life's needs as well.

Trustees unanimously agreed to turn copies of the document over to administrative staff and individual schools for reaction and comment.

Stables said it is only a starting point and more input was needed before a definitive policy could be drawn.

Stable's report says that once the basics are learned, the system also must teach skills that include the higher level intellectual capacities of critical thinking, analysis and the evaluation of ideas.

Education should provide a situation where students can learn to be individuals with varying interests and learn how to share responsibility with others.

The district has a policy to encourage and assist teachers to develop a wider range of teaching styles and to increase the skill with which they are used.

The school system must intensify its efforts to provide an adequate education for those with learning disabilities and to develop programs to meet the needs of the gifted students, the report says.

The district desires to encourage input from all levels of the system and to assure that such input is considered for its merit rather than just how senior the contributor is.

Chamber Pleads For U.S. Ferry

Washington State Ferries is trying to gauge the impact of abandoning the Sidney-Anacortes ferry run but the Chamber of Commerce has no doubts about the ferry's value.

In a letter to Washington State Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, chamber president Henry Vissers says the Anacortes ferry is a vital highway between Canada and the U.S.

He says the chamber feels it is in the best interests of both countries to maintain the service so that Canadians and Americans can meet one another.

Ray has said the run is a luxury the state can do without and has recommended it be discontinued.

Washington State Ferries is to determine statistically if such action would release a ferry for South Puget Sound service and whether a ferry would earn more if it were removed from the run and put elsewhere.

Lee Kraker, ferries marketing manager, says public reaction will play a substantial part in considerations.

So far, the loudest cries have come from businesses in Victoria and Anacortes.

State Ferries will present its findings to the Highway Commission for a final decision. The five-member commission meets May 16 or May 17.

In its letter, the Sidney-North Saanich chamber says last year (April 1, 1976 to March 31, 1977, 233,620 people travelled on the Anacortes ferry.

The chamber says the Sidney terminal was built by the Canadian government for the specific use and benefit of Washington State Ferries.

The terminal is maintained on a year-round basis by the Canadian department of public works, the chamber says.

Closet Was Her Only Life

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. (WP) — A 30-year-old suburban Baltimore mother, who was accused of imprisoning her nine-year-old daughter in a bedroom closet most of the child's life, was found guilty of child abuse and three other related charges by a jury Monday.

The woman's husband — the childs stepfather — pleaded guilty to the same four charges Monday. The child, Patricia Anne Saunders, had been rescued by police last July 5 from a closet 23 inches wide and 52 inches deep that was filled with human filth.

The jury took only 58 minutes to reach a verdict of guilty for Linda Faye Burchfield on child abuse, false imprisonment, conspiracy to commit child abuse, and assault charges. Out of the jury's hearing, Judge Lloyd L. Simpkins described the closet where Patty was found as the child's "bedroom, her bathroom, her dining room, her playroom."

Mrs. Burchfield and her husband, Billy Floyd Burchfield, 38, who face a total of 30 years in prison on the two main child abuse charges, will be sentenced May 27 by Judge Simpkins.

Lt. Lee Peters testified during the five-day trial in Somerset County Circuit Court that he was able to free Patty from the closet only after he aside a chest that had been forced Burchfield to push jammed against the closet door.

Peters testified that Patty's first words were, "I'm hungry." Patty, whose imprisonment was brought to police attention by a relative, was taken to hospital where doctors diagnosed her as suffering from "extreme malnutrition and dehydration."

Although she was nearly nine years old and should have weighed a minimum of 50 pounds, doctors said she was about the size of a two-year-old, weighing 20 pounds and standing not quite three feet tall.

The trial was moved to this Easter Shore hamlet because of extensive pretrial publicity about the case, which detective Joyce Chaney of the Baltimore County police department's child abuse team described to the jurors as "the worst I have ever seen."

Peters said that when Burchfield first opened the closet door he saw, "only a shadow" on the left side. But when Burchfield called, "Come out, Patty," Peters said a child with dark, sunken eyes, yellowing scalp, scarred lipes, matted hair and a blue shirt and pants covered with human waste emerged from the darkness. The only objects in the closet beside human waste, he said, were a spoon and a small bowl.

Peters said that when he carried Patty from the second floor bedroom to the living room of the Burchfield's townhouse, Mrs. Burchfield, who was sitting in the living room wearing a bathrobe, said only, "Put her down, she can walk."

Mrs. Burchfield has two other daughters, Donna, 12, and Susan, 11. On the day of Patty's rescue and the Burchfield arrest, Donna was in the hospital for an abortion. Her stepfather, Burchfield, still faces a charge of statutory rape in connection with that abortion.

Mrs. Burchfield had testified that she bore Patty as the result of a rape and that, as a result, she "couldn't stand her," and found it "unbearable" to be near the child.

Defence attorney Robert P. Mann, of Towson, told the jury that Mrs. Burchfield was herself the product of "a very unpleasant childhood." He said she had been given away by her parents when she was one month old and never had the "security" of a formal adoption. Her foster mother beat her during drunken sprees, her father allegedly raped her when she was six, and she was raped again by another man at age 12, the attorney said.

Peters said he visited Patty two weeks ago in her foster home and found her "extremely happy."

"When she irst came into the room I didn't recognize her, she had grown so much," Peters said. "It was unbelievable."

In the nine months since Peters carried Patty away from her closet prison, she has gained 30 pounds, grown seven inches and started going to school for the first time, he said. She is enrolled in special education classes. Peters said she could count only up to three when rescued. "She's just extremely slow," he said. "No one had ever bothered to teach her.

Greedy Fat Boy Now 69

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) — Billy Bunter, the indestructible fat boy of Greyfriars School, is 69 this year.

Billy was born in a penny boys' paper called The Magnet in March, 1908, and has appeared in one form or another, in books and on television and radio, ever since.

He remains a greedy and untruthful 15-year-old, personifying many of the worst characteristics of the human race. He is a backward student in a class called the Remove or Lower Fourth, under the steely blue eye of Horatio Quelch, MA.

Quelch's study now contains a television set as well as the stout cane he continues to apply to the posteriors of offending schoolboys

The inhabitants of Greyfriars were the brain-children of a scholarly gentleman named Frank Richards, who hammered out Bunter stories until he died at the age of 92 in Kingsgate, Kent. Nine years ago, the Remove was removed to the Howard Baker Press, located in a stately double-fronted house near the famed Wimbledon tennis courts.

Baker, a lively 51-year-old Anglo-Irishman, has been cashing in on the nostalgia of generations of Bunter fans around the world by having the original stories litho-6graphed, but between hard covers and published as single volumes containing some six issues.

At three guineas ($9) a copy, the books are out of the price range of most contemporary schoolboys but a lively market has sprung up among middle-aged and elderly readers who had been deprived of the Greyfriars chronicles since Magnet and its sister publications, Gem and Popular, were wiped out by rationing in the Second World War.

Whether younger audiences will become attuned to Bunter's anguished cries of "Yaroogh" as retribution descends on him remains to be seen but Baker, pointing proudly to a large colored map of Bunterland on his office wall, expressed confidence that the fat schoolboy's immortality is assured.

Japan Sticks with Swords

By JOHN SAAR
Washington Post

TOKURA, Japan—The two apprentices grunted and swung with swift, rhythmic grace. Sparks cascaded over the squatting, immobile figure of their master. The chunk of white-hot metal at his feet sang and yielded under the pounding sledgehammers and gradually became a sword.

The music of the hammer on swordsmith Yuhihiro Miyairi's anvil is a timeless sound and a defiant reassertion of 1,000 years and more of Japanese martial tradition. Since 1588, some strong-willed leaders—including shoguns, emperors and Gen. Douglas MacArthur—have tried to separate the Japanese from their swords and to prevent people like Miyairi from making more. To be brief, they failed.

Except for a few criminal gangs who still maintain internal discipline with the deadly, curved blades, swords are no longer used as weapons. As treasured possessions, however, revered for magnificent workmanship and the links with the samurai spirit of Japan's violent past, they are coming back fast.

After the Second World War, MacArthur, as supreme commander for the allied powers, ordered the Japanese to turn in their swords. They were felt to be a symbol of barbarous militarism. Three million blades were surrendered and destroyed, but many otherwise obedient Japanese balked at the idea and cached prized swords away until they became legal again in 1953. One and a half million are now registered in private ownership.

Swords are back in the shops, and selling well. They shimmer in department stores and draw crowds at exhibitions. Valuable antique swords appeared on the catalog of a Tokyo art auction last month for the first time in more than 30 years. The government has presented swords to Arab leaders and recently it reopened the foundry that for centuries supplied a steel of legendary strength. Three tons a year will go to the 30 craftsmen who make swords full-time and the 180 parttimers who are gradually dropping the sideline production of cutlery. A good steak knife may be more useful, but a weapon capable of lopping one or several men in half engages everyone's attention.

Collectors are doctors, landowners and company presidents who can afford the cost of one of the swords. A $3,000 to $4,000 price tag is common and a sword with a history is worth far more. A blade used in a famous Harakiri (ritual suicide) or some heroic battle can fetch $50,000. In the classy Ginza store where Mitsuo Shibata equips the carriage trade with expensive blades, he unsheathed an engraved sword with the shiny but faintly uncared-for look of something lost in the attic for 30 years. It was 800 years old, made in the Kamakura golden age of swordmaking, and worth $20,000 he said.

"This is a sword restoration," said Shibata, "The Japanese are very eager to buy swords. Business is good."

Nourished by fighting Samurai dramas on television and Kabuki plays, the sword mystique in Japan equates to gun fascination in America. Sensitive to the sword's symbolism for Japanese militarism in the 1930s and 1940s, experts play down the thrills of "cold steel" and stress artistic and spiritual values.

"After the gun, the sword became old-fashioned," said swordsmith Miyairi. "We never use them to kill people now, but they have their own life. People love swords."

Rising from the beaten earth of his smithy in this quiet mountain town, he added: "They are very beautiful, they appeal to the spirit of the Japanese."

Miyairi's life centres on an exacting craft that enlists ancient techniques and spiritual support in the search for perfection. "This is a holy place," he says, "because this task is above human power alone."

Miyairi is a squat man with balding hair shorn close to the skull. He wears traditional white work robes that expose stoutly muscled forearms covered with scars from years of melding "fire, steel and water" and the forge. Except for spectacles that focus glittering, gimlet eyes — he is the ageless artisan personified—easily taken for any of his sword-making predecessors over the last 1,300 years.

As one of two contemporary swordsmiths so skilled that the government has judged them living national treasures, Miyairi is the best of his generation. The competition is with the past. He struggles endlessly to match the swords of master craftsmen long dead. He can recognize at a glance the work of 100 or so leading swordsmiths since the 10th century, and he knows their standards.

In a mass-production world, Miyairi is still determined to forge swords "which will survive forever." A dour man, he is attended by six grimy apprentices he defines as "young men who eat for nothing." He directs them by grunts.

Laboring together in silent absorption, they follow the ancient formulas to toughen the steel and temper the blade. It takes a month, four kinds of steel and infinite care to make a sword that has the proper blend of strength and flexibility. Color, shape, balance and edge must be just so before Miyairi sends it off into posterity with his name on the hilt.

The steel is continually broken, beaten and heated to eliminate weaknesses. Science alone does not explain it, Miyairi admits, but the 1,000-year-old iron nails he salvaged from a Nara temple have special qualities.

He is equally fastidious about everything else. Water must be soft and the climate neither too hot nor too cold. Rain is bad. Two months a year, Miyairi and his apprentices go into the mountains to make chestnut-wood charcoal for the necessary high temperatures and even heat.

OPEN CAMPUS KEY TO SUCCESS

FARIBAULT, Minn. (AP) — On an unfenced campus where openness is seen as a key to success, 40 doctors, therapists and teachers are trying to rid 30 adolescents of their emotional problems at an annual cost of about $46,350 a patient.

The pupil-patients say the treatment and one-to-one teaching at the Constance Bultman Wilson Centre for Education and Psychiatry is effective.

"I was suicidal and would have been dead in five years," said a 17-year-old girl.

"Before I came here I had problems with the law and was sent to a state institution," said a teen-aged boy. "Now I'm in touch with my feelings and acceptance has become important. I've been taught to help myself."

The centre, founded in 1971 by Dr. Robert Wilson, combines three institutions: a psychiatric hospital, a school and a college branch which trains psychiatrists. Wilson, 44, says there is no institution in the world like it.

Patients aged 14 to 22 undergo psychoanalysis, psychiatry and teaching and generally stay one or two years, long enough to get used to being well.

Patients range from the psychotic to the withdrawn, from the violence-prone to the academically underachieving.

Each patient has his own therapist, co-therapist, recreational assistant and teacher. At individual psychotherapy sessions four times a week, the patient is encouraged to express feelings. Two or three times a week, he is in group therapy. At high-school and college-level classes, the students are encouraged to call teachers by their first name.

The centre charges $115 a day, excluding school. It is paid by the family or insurance companies or, in some cases, by welfare or other government agencies.

Before opening the centre, Wilson practised adolescent psychiatry at the Mayo Clinic in nearby Rochester. But he saw the need for a live-in, long-term centre.

The road wasn't easy. In 1973, staff cuts were avoided only when the staff voted itself a 10-per-cent pay cut. In 1975, on surer footing, the centre bought a 106-acre campus and four buildings.

Oil-Rich Iran Finds It Has Uranium, Too

TEHRAN, Iran — Besides its vast oil wealth, Iran has reserves of another key energy source destined to become increasingly valuable in the future: uranium.

Iranian and Western nuclear energy experts confirm the existence of the reserves in Iran, but say their size and whether they can be commercially exploited at current uranium prices remain to be determined.

"They look promising, there's no doubt about that," an Iranian official said of the uranium anomalies discovered so far. Anomalies are indications of mineral content in rock based on magnetic readings. According to officials, some of the geological formations in which the anomalies have been found are similar to the richest in the United States.

(The United States has the world's largest known reserves of uranium, estimated at 277,000 short tons of U308, according to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.)

To ascertain the size and quality of its reserves, Iran is launching one of the most ambitious uranium exploration programs ever undertaken, Iranian officials said. The government has budgeted $300 million for the program over the next 10 years and the first phase — three years of "airborne prospecting" — is due to start by early May, they said.

Iran, the second largest oil producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, wants to be a supplier of uranium to fuel nuclear power stations after its oil runs out in about 20 years.

As an energy exporter, "our policy and our ambiton is to sit on the same side of the table as we are sitting right now," said Ghassem Arabyan, head of the uranium exploration division in the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran.

To achieve this goal, Iran is seeking joint ventures in foreign countries and is negotiating such agreements with Niger, Gabon and Zambia, Arabyan said. No foreign participation will be allowed in domestic uranium ventures, however.

As part of a plan to stockpile uranium until its own production gets well under way, Iran has already purchased 30,000 tons of uranium from foreign sources, with deliveries starting this year and lasting until 1994. Iranian officials are keeping any projections of domestic uranium production close to the vest, but a paper presented at a nuclear technology conference in Iran this month, cited agreements to purchase 30,000 tons of uranium concentrates from the 40,000 tons required up to 1990 — implying that Iran expects to produce 10,000 tons itself. Western officials said this was a conservative estimate.

Iran plans to install about 20 nuclear power stations to generate some 23,000 megawatts of electricity by the early 1990s. Two stations have been ordered from West Germany and two more are being negotiated with France.

The air surveys will be carried out by three firms — Australian, West German and French — under contract to the Atomic Energy Organization. The surveys will concentrate on a hilly strip of land along Iran's eastern border and the Azerbaijan area in the northwest, officials said.

LIBERATION PAINS WOMEN

MONTREAL (CP) — A New York psychiatrist says women are emotionally unable to cope with their new lives brought about by the women's liberation movement.

"Women are going through the pain of liberation," said Dr. Alexandra Symonds, who teaches at the New York University College of Medicine, the American Institute of Psychoanalysis and the New School for Social RSJB.

"A woman's career has become part of her sense of identity, something which was previously restricted to men."

Until recently, women only worked out of necessity, not out of a desire for self-fulfilment, Dr. Symonds said.

"But they are in terrible conflict because they can't cope with the aggressive and competitive situations which men take for granted."

Dr. Symonds said that in a work situation, women often resort to childish behavior such as crying when criticized. Women had been encouraged all their lives to express dependent needs and had been discouraged from being independent.

As career women become more competent and recognized in their work, they start to fear they will lose their femininity, Dr. Symonds said.

"Often, women who are at the highest point of their careers give it up. They are in terror of feeling masculine and fly into a panic at the suggestion that they have masculine characteristics."

The doctor said women still try to please the men in their lives and they "have got to learn to be less submissive and self-effacing."

Kidco Runs Foul of Adultco

RAMONA, Calif. (AP) — The 12-year-old president of a company with gross earnings of up to $3,000 monthly has been ordered to appear before the state board of equalization to explain why his firm has no permit to sell its product — manure.

Richard Cessna Jr., president of Kidco, Inc., and his three co-officers, aged 9 to 14, also have been accused by the state of failing to charge sales tax.

The youngsters — Richard's sister, Ne-Ne, 9, vice president; another sister, Bette, 11, secretary, and a half-sister, June Cole, 14, treasurer — went into business a year ago with a contract to sweep the six main streets of San Diego Country Estates for $150 monthly.

They branched out by contracting with their father, who supervises the developments' 110-horse stables, to remove manure and wood shavings.

After composting the mixture, they sell it to landscapers and the local golf course at prices lower than commercial suppliers.

Cessna's father, Richard, said he will accompany them Tuesday to the hearing in San Diego, about 45 miles away.

"The board of equalization says they need a permit because it is something tangible and that they have to add a sales tax for their customers," the elder Cessna said in an interview. "They may have to pay the state sales tax on their past sales, plus penalties."

There was no estimate on how much money might be ruled due.

But he and his son believe "the sales tax was already paid when the feed for the horses and the wood shavings to bed down the stables were brought in."

Kidco grossed $3,000 last October, its biggest sales month. The youngsters refuse to disclose their average earnings because, young Cessna says, some of the kids at school try to borrow money.

Hospital Warning Given

WASHINGTON (WP) — A patient's chance of death, harm or lingering illness after an operation can be 2 1-2 times as great in some hospitals as in others, a study of 17 "typical" hospitals in nine states has discovered.

The finding shows the need for a national monitoring system of hospital "outcomes" — or what happens to patients as a result of their treatment — Dr. William Forrest Jr. of Stanford University told a House subcommittee yesterday.

There are hospitals in many cities, including Washington, which doctors believe should be closed because they harm so many patients, Dr. Charles Child of the University of Michigan told the same body.

In an interview he said he had no specific Washington hospitals in mind but was only speaking "generally" based on what he hears from surgeons here and elsewhere.

Such testimony nonetheless shows that strong measures are needed to protect helpless patients, said Rep. John D. Moss (D-Calif.), chairman of the subcommittee on oversight and investigations. The subcommittee began a new set of hearings on surgical care.

Child directed a 1973 to 1975 study of 1,695 "untoward incidents" or complications in 1,493 operations, all less than wholly successful in one war or another. That study, co-sponsored by two surgeons' groups and 95 cooperating hospitals, concluded that 786 of the unfortunate incidents, including 85 deaths, were preventable.

Forrest headed a 1975 study by the National Academy of Sciences, made for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's National Centre for Health Services Research.

Child and forrest agreed that no one knows just how much careless, harmfull or totally unnecessary surgery there may be, but someone ought to start to find out.

OBJECTORS PUT TEETH INTO TV AD PROTEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a petition endorsed by 10,000 health professionals and accompanied by a bag full of decayed teeth, a consumer group today asked the U.S. government to ban sugary snack food TV commercials aimed at children.

The Centre for Science in the Public Interest also asked the Federal Trade Commission to require ads for other foods to disclose their sugar content and to include a health warning for those foods normally eaten with a meal which contain more than 10 per cent sugar.

It was the second similar request lodged with the FTC in recent weeks. The Boston-based Action on Children's Television recently filled a petition seeking a crackdown on candy ads aimed at children.

"Sugary food products, especially when eaten between meals, have been shown to be a major cause of tooth decay, yet candy bars, soft drinks, cakes and cookies, and sugary snacks are the most heavily advertised products on children's television programs," the petition said.

"By the age of 18, Americans average 14 decayed, missing or filled teeth per person.

The group asked for a total ban on advertising of sugar-filled snacks on programs aimed at children.

Attached to the petition was a plastic bag with 170 pulled, decayed teeth, contributed by dentists and others who signed the petition. Many of the teeth were children's.

The petition was signed by nine dental school deans and one medical school dean in addition to more than 10,000 health professionals in schools, hospitals and elsewhere to whom the petition was circulated during the past six months.

Both the American Medical Association and the American Dental Association backed the project.

Toxic Chemicals Found in Sewers

By JOHN FILIATREAU
Washington Post

LOUISVILLE — Facing a public health menace hauntingly similar to the Kepone in Virginia's James River in 1975, officials here are trying to figure out how to dispose of at least six tons of two obscure but highly toxic industrial chemicals.

The chemicals, hexachlorocyclopentadiene (HCP) and a related chlorinated hydrocarbon, octachlorocyclopentene (OCTA), were discovered in the Louisville sewer system March 29 after workers at the main treatment plant began complaining of skin rashes, nausea and loss of memory — all symptoms of exposure to the substances.

HCP, apparently slightly more toxic than OCTA, is a constituent of Kepone, which was blamed for worker sickness and pollution of the James River near Hopewell, Va., nearly two years ago.

HCP is primarily an ingredient in pesticides, resins, dyes and flame-resistant fabrics. Its chemical sidekick, OCTA, is a manufacturing by-product that is not generally sold.

Some of the products chemically fathered by HCP are endrin, chlordane, Kepone, heptachlor and Tris. Tris is a flame-retardant used until recently in children's sleepwear; the other four are insecticides.

If the chemicals' names are familiar, it may be because all five have been indicted by the Environmental Protection Agency or the Consumer Product Safety Commission as carcinogens — cancer-causing agents.

HCP itself has not been identified as a carcinogen, according to EPA chemist Ralph Jennings, but apparently no one has studied whether it is the origin of the sinister strain in some of its offspring.

Thirty-two workers in Louisville have been treated for symptoms apparently caused by breathing fumes of the HCP and OCTA. Officials say none suffered serious injury.

The discovery of the chemicals forced the closing of the city's main sewage treatment plant, the third largest along the 981-mile Ohio River. Since million gallons of untreated March 29, an estimated 100 sewage has been pumped into the river daily. That dumping will continue for weeks, at least. Federal and state officials are investigating how the chemicals got into the sewer system.

A major factor in the banning of the HCP-fathered pesticides was the very quality that made them valuable in destroying insects: they are unusually stable, lingering for years in soil or water without breaking down. That stability makes their destruction that much more difficult and expensive for Louisville.

NO DROPPING FBI CHARGES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite FBI claims of shattered morale, Attorney-General Griffin Bell says he will continue the prosecution of an FBI man who is accused of illegal mail-opening and wire-tapping because it is a matter of principle.

"What is at stake is the rule of law," Bell said Monday after listening for 90 minutes as FBI Director Clarence Kelley and 10 agents complained that bureau moral has suffered because of the charges and the justice department investigation.

U.S. Changing Speed Signs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speed signs along United States roads and highways will be converted to the metric system next year under regulations being drawn up by the Federal Highway Administration.

There is no plan to print both metric and English figures on signs to ease the familiarization, a highway administration official said.

Instead of 40 miles per hour, for example, a sign will read 64 k.p.h. (kilometres per hour).

$77M Suit Says 1,100 Secretly Given DES

WASHINGTON (WP) — Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Patsy T. Mink and two other women Monday filed suit against the University of Chicago and a leading pharmaceutical maker, charging that during pregnancy they were given, without their knowledge, a drug now linked to cancer in offspring.

They asked $77.7 million in damages on behalf of themselves and nearly 1,100 other women who were given the drug DES in an experiment. The experiment, conducted in 1951 and 1952 was designed to find out if it would prevent miscarriage.

Mink and the other plaintiffs in the class action, Phyllis S. Wetherill of the District of Columbia and Gladys E. Lang of Stonybrook, N.Y., alleged that while receiving prenatal care at university clinics they were given and directed to take DES while 1,081 other women were given dummy pills. The pills were distributed randomly without regard to medical needs, according to the complaint.

None of the women was advised that she was participating in an experiment, the complaint said. Mink and Wetherill each charged that she was told she was getting "vitamin pills."

Lang said she was told the pills would help to prevent complications in pregnancy, although, the complaint said, Dieckmann "personally believed that prior studies had now shown DES to be effective during pregnancy for any medical purpose."

The plaintiffs, represented by lawyers for the Health Research Group, a Washington-based unit of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen, Inc., named as co-defendant Eli Lilly & Co., the Indianapolis-based firm that supplied DES pills for the study and provided one of its own employees to Dieckmann.

The class-action lawsuit seek $10,000 in damages to compensate each of the 1,081 women who got DES.

SKETCH CLUB AT HILLSIDE

Eighty works will be on display in the Hillside Shopping Mall this week, marking the 68th annual exhibition of the Victoria Sketch Club.

The works, comprising oils, water colors and drawings, will be on view through Saturday during regular shopping hours which include Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Engine Switch By GM

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., swamped by consumer complaints and mounting legal actions over the use of Chevrolet engines in other GM cars, has worked out a settlement to appease disgruntled owners.

But the attorney-general for Illinois, the state where the whole engine flap started, says GM's offer does not go far enough.

Under the GM plan, an owner of a new 1977 Buick, Oldsmobile or Pontiac with a Chevy engine may trade that car for a new 1977 model, but must pay eight cents for each mile he drove the original car. Or, the owner may keep the car and get a 36,000-mile 36-month engine warranty.

But Illinois Attorney-General William Scott, while saying the plan is a step in the right direction, said it allows dealers to make thousands of dollars and still shortchange consumers.

Scott, one of 10 state attorneys-general to file suit against GM over the engine switch, said he will continue to seek fines from the car manufacturer and its dealers and intends to ask a U.S. district judge to require GM to make adjustments without cost to the purchasers.

The problem began two months ago when a Chicago man found his Olds Delta 88 came with a 350-cubic-inch V8 Chevy engine instead of an Olds Rocket engine.

GM said the offer of either a new vehicle or special warranty is good on compact, intermediate and full-size Buicks, Oldsmobiles and Pontiacs delivered to customers on or before April 1. The offer expires June 1.

Under the policy, a customer can:

—Return his car to the dealer for a credit toward the purchase of another 1977 car of the same make with whatever engine is then available on the model selected.

The credit will be for the original purchase price—excluding registration, licensing or sales tax—less the mileage charge. A charge for removal of any equipment or damage beyond normal wear and tear also would be deducted.

—Or, the owner can keep his vehicle and GM will provide free of charge a warranty covering the engine, transmission and rear axle for 36 months or 36,000 miles, whichever comes first. Normally, those parts are covered by a 12-month 12,000-mile warranty.

GM said it is still putting Chevy engines into cars made by its other divisions, and has no plans to discontinue the practice.

N.S. Indians Give Terms

ESKASONI, N.S. (CP)—Nova Scotia's Micmac Indians on Monday presented their aboriginal rights claim to the province of Nova Scotia and a submission for compensation for lost rights, to Warren Allmand, Indian affairs minister, in a ceremony here Monday.

The 500-page document resulting from four years' research was presented in a ceremony to Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand.

The brief contains archeological, anthropoligical, historical and legal material to support the claim.

Having occupied and used the land and resources of the province "since time immemorial" the MicMacs claim aboriginal title to the land. They say the title has not been extinguished by treaty and they have never received compensation for the loss of use of those lands and resources.

Allmand said the federal government position is to negotiate claims "based on a traditional use and occupancy of lands where rights have not been extinguished."

"I look forward to settling some of these claims so that justice and hope can be accorded the MicMac people."

The document will be examined by the office of native claims and the justice department, Allmand said.

If they conclude there is a basis for negotiation, he said, negotiations will begin.

Each of the 12 band chiefs in the province participated in the reading of the compensation demands.

The compensation claim seeks federal statutes preserving hunting, fishing and trapping grounds for the use of MicMacs on reserves or unoccupied Crown land and replacement. In place of licenses for hunting, fishing and trapping, Indians would have special status cards issued by the Union of Nova Scotia Indians.

The claim does not seek return of land lost but does ask for protection of reserve sovereignty by local governments; an increase in the land base for the sole use of MicMacs; exemption from all forms of taxation; royalties on all previous and future mineral and other resources of the province; use and occupancy of unoccupiied Crown lands, including those leased to pulp and paper companies, provision of resources for cultural preservation and guaranteed adequate medical services.

The MicMac population in the province now lives on 46 reserves and has rights over only two per cent of the land, the chiefs said.

They said the loss of rights has resulted in a 94-per-cent unemployment rate, a 98.6-per-cent school dropout rate, higher than average infant mortality and lower-than-average life exxpectancy as well as fewer medical and social benefits.

Parole Officers Quit Threat

OTTAWA (CP)—Some parole officers say they will resign if they also become peace officers when the new federal corrections agency is created. A government proposal would merge the National Parole Service and Canadian Penitentiary Service into a new agency, resulting in a number of changes which are not yet clear to employees.

One senior officer in Toronto has written Prime Minister Trudeau to ask that officers be exempted from peace officer status.

A peace officer has the power to arrest, which parole officers do not have at present. They say that if they are given the power, they would have to accept the responsibility to arrest or face criminal charges.

"Imposition of peace officer status would convert parole into a regimented, uniform police function," the letter to Trudeau says.

The Ontario Parole Officers Association echoes similar sentiments in a brief prepared for the Commons justice committee, which will deal with a bill encompassing some measures to create the new agency.

Association president Bob Hope of Guelph said Monday it is not clear what new powers the officers would have.

However, he says, he has been told by parole service director William Outerbridge that they would be limited and similar to those held by probation officers in Ontario.

The parole officers might be asked to escort prisoners released from penitentiary on "temporary absences," a job now done by prison workers who have the power to arrest.

TRUDEAU RETIREMENT SEEN BY CHRISTMAS

HARVEY, N.B. (CP) — A western Canadian MP predicted Monday that Prime Minister Trudeau will retire before Christmas and cite health reasons for the move.

William Skoreyko, Progressive Conservative member for Edmonton East, told a Conservative riding meeting here that former cabinet minister John Turner was waiting in the wings to take over the Liberal party.

Fred McCain, Conservative MP for Carleton-Charlotte, said Trudeau "has failed utterly in regard to national unity and has imposed upon the provinces in such a way as to contribute to dissension in Canada."

McCain said he feared the growth of separatist sentiment in other parts of Canada unless the federal government negotiated in good faith with the provinces.

"There has not yet been any official meeting with the new government of Quebec," he said.

"Trudeau wants confrontation rather than discussions."

Mineral Strategy Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada is being required to update its mineral policy to meet social, political and economic aspirations, both domestic and foreign, says Geoffrey Hjorleifson of the federal ministry of energy, mines and resources.

He told the annual meeting Monday of the Geological Association of Canada that minerals are no longer simple economic tools to be considered as just another factor of production.

"They have taken on increasing political and social connotations, both within and outside the world's industrialized communities. We have entered the era of world resource diplomacy."

Hjorleifson said Canada is faced with developing a national mineral strategy responsive to the national system and regional aspirations and to negotiating Canada's position in the scheme of international affairs.

A national mineral strategy would have to grapple with some resolution of the federal-provincial jurisdictional dilemma, Canadian reliance on the U.S. economy, and Canada's traditional support of a private enterprise market economy.

Opportunities for high growth rates will be available only to very specific minerals, such as uranium and coal, he said.

Contrasting views on world mineral reserves were expressed at a Resources for the Future symposium held in conjcnction with the convention.

Leo Miller, vice-president of Texasgulf Ltd., told delegates that the world has virtually limitless supplies of mineral reserves, and as demand grows, the geological and mineral industries will react to meet this demand.

However, Brian Skinner, a professor of geology at Yale University, said that by the end of this century there will be serious shortages of mercury, silver and tin.

French-Only Seen As Cure for 'Babel'

MONTREAL (CP) — The Parti Quebecois language policy is not incompatible with the federal system, Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin said Monday.

The federal government's bilingualism policy has never prevented other provinces from remaining unilingual English, he told more than 500 persons at the annual meeting of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Services of Canada.

"We are just doing 100 years later than the other provinces what all the other provinces have been doing."

To right the wrongs of history, he said, English may have to make room for the promotion of French. But the Parti Quebecois will honor its commitment to respect individual rights.

Laurin said the party rejected bilingualism because "we must have a common language if we don't want to make our society a Babel."

Faced with several hostile questions, Laurin maintained the calm air that has characterized his public relations campaign on behalf of the PQ white paper on language since its release April 1.

In response to another question, Laurin said the Parti Quebecois did not view the treatment of francophones outside Quebec as an ideal for how Quebec should treat its English community.

"We wouldn't want to make Quebec anglophones endure what francophones outside Quebec have suffered," he said.

RED ISLAND SURVEILLANCE

The department of national defence office of information, Alberta region, said the island, named North Pole-22, is about 450 miles from the pole and 270 miles west of Ellesmere Island. Russian scientists are conducting meteoroligical and hydrographic studies there.

Trade Picture Turns Brighter

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade prospects for Canada should improve this year because of economic recovery internationally, John MacDonald, chairman of the Export Development Corporation, says in the federal agency's 1976 annual report.

But MacDonald says that because many countries, such as Canada, face problems of high unemployment and investment, trade competition will remain intense in the next 12 months.

The corporation, which provides loans, insurance and foreign investment guarantees to help finance sales of Canadian goods abroad, supported sales of about $2 billion in 1976.

"In Canada, the recent fall in the exchange value of the Canadian dollar and the lowering of domestic interest rates will help the competitive position of Canadian exports."

Despite inflation and productivity problems last year, Canadian merchandise exports grew by 9.5 per cent in real terms compared with a drop of seven per cent in 1975.

Last year, the country returned to a surplus of exports over imports after falling into the unusual position of a deficit in 1975.

But critics of government trade policy note that Canada is importing about twice as much in manufactured products as it is exporting. They say the country has relied too much on export of unprocessed primary resources.

In addition, Canada's overall international balance of payments, which includes loans, interest and other payments, as well as trade, remains unhealthy.

English Begin Fight

MONTREAL (CP) — The fledgling Preparatory Committee for an 11th Province issued a call Monday for the restoration of what it called a fully bilingual Quebec.

Union Nationale (MNA) William Shaw, who has played a prominent role in the four-month-old group, urged a boisterous mainly English-speaking crowd to "fight for a Quebec within Canada."

He said the committee's minimum demand is that the Parti Quebecois goverment create a bilingual zone within the province if it insists on ending official bilingualism, as stated in the PQ's white paper on language policy.

"But if the rest of Quebec separates, this part of Quebec will remain in Canada," he said, repeating the committee's main argument against Quebec independence.

"This is not simply a prepartory committee for an 11th province, it is saying to (Premier Rene Levesque, 'Well, if you can separate, so can we.'"

In a question-and-answer period, one woman drew applause when she called for Quebec to remain within Confederation but voiced opposition to the idea of an English-speaking "Quebec West."

McGill University professor Raymond Martin was greeted with catcalls when he attempted to explain the reasons behind the PQ government's goal of promoting the French language in Quebec.

Conservation Credits Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — It would be wiser for the government to provide federal tax deductions to home-owners for energy conservation than for property tax, Ian Watson (L — LaPrairie) said Monday in the commons.

Watson, a Quebec lawyer, said he favored tax deductions for costs of adding insulation or installing solar heating devices, but he opposed a motion by Stanley Haidasz (L — Parkdale) that up to $300 in municipal property tax on owner-occupied houses or rent on accommodations become deductible from federally taxable income.

The motion did not come to a vote and probably won't be debated again at this parliamentary session.

Several provinces have tax credit plans to ease the cost of housing.

James McGrath (PC — St. John's East) said he supported the motion, but thought a figure of $500 would be more realistic.

Millions of Canadian families pay an inordinately high proportion of their incomes on housing, and high mortgage rates are partly to blame, he said.

Water Crisis Hits Calgary

Times News Services

CALGARY — Water works officials were battling to keep water taps flowing after hot, dry weather during the weekend almost brought the city to the brink of a major water crisis Sunday night and Monday morning.

G. H. Johnston, water works manager, said in an interview that record April consumption of 140-million gallons of water Saturday, 146-million gallons Sunday and about 100-million gallons Monday left reservoirs only 50 per cent full.

Temperatures the last three days have been near 28 degrees celcus and today's forecast calls for more hot, dry weather.

Johnston, who supervised the complicated distribution of available water from underground reservoirs during the weekend, said the water reserves were expected to be back to full capacity this morning.

He said the 140-million-plus gallons of water consumed on two successive days compares with an April water consumption high of 114-million gallons in 1976 and 70-million gallons in 1975.

The Saskatchewan government, meanwhile, is prepared to offer assistance in finding alternative water supplies to communities hit by the current drought, Environment Minister Neil Byers said Monday in Regina.

Responding to Neil McMallan during question period, Byers reiterated his assurance that the government was prepared to help communities which run low on water. He said the Saskatchewan research council had developed an inventory of water supplies so communities would know where to look for alternative sources. As well, the department of agriculture has pumping and piping equipment ready for individual farmers and communities who want to bring in water from other sources.

Alta. Cool To Ginter Share Plan

EDMONTON (CP) — A British Columbia brewery owner's plan to allow beer drinkers to trade bottle caps for shares may not be permitted in Alberta.

K. E. Baker, deputy chairman of the Alberta Liquir Control Board, said Monday "the plan doesn't apply here . . . because we've never heard of it. It's news to us."

Baker said Ben Ginter's scheme is likely ill-fated because "I doubt the liquor board would approve it. I don't think it would be legal."

Ginter has offered 10 shares in his company to anyone turning 200 of his Uncle Ben's bottle tops back to the company. Ginter's main B.C. company, Uncle Ben's Industries, has been in receivership since January, 1976, and Ginter has been exploring various ways of raising additional financing.

CRASH FATAL TO 67 HOGS

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Sixty-seven hogs were killed and a man seriously injured Monday night in a semi-trailer-car accident on Highway 1 near here.

Alberta to Keep Rent Controls

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government Monday ended weeks of speculation when it announced its rent controls will be continued on a modified basis for the next three years, adding a warning to landlords.

Graham Harle, consumer and corporate affairs minister, told the legislature the controls, imposed 18 months ago and due to expire June 30, will be extended to June 30, 1980, basically aimed at protecting residents of less expensive accommodation from rapid rent escalations.

Harle warned landlords that any rent increases at the time of decontrol "of the magnitude experienced recently can only result in the government . . . reassessing its position."

BID TO KEEP TRADE POST

EDMONTON (CP) — The trading post from which Simon Fraser set out to explore British Columbia should not be destroyed by a hydro-electric project, the Alberta legislature was told Monday.

Culture Minister Horst Schmid tabled a report by John Hicks which recommended that the land immediately around old Fort Dunvegan in northwestern Alberta should be protected by being designated as an historic site.

Although it was suggested a concrete dam upstream from the town would be acceptable, an earth dam closer to the community was ruled out.

Lougheed to Visit Russia, Mid-East

EDMONTON (CP)— Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta announced today he will visit the Soviet Union and Middle East countries in June. Lougheed said the five-week trip is not a trade mission, but a fact-finding tour that has the blessing of the federal department of external affairs.

Pensions Assured

REGINA (CP)—The Saskaskatchewan government moved Monday to protect employees who change jobs after joining the civil service and lose their pension benefits as a result. Those who join the government service in future will, after three years on the job, have their pensions locked-in. In the event they leave the government for another job, their pension contributions and the government's matching contribution will stay in a fund to accumulate interest and provide a pension in later years.

Service Extended

WINNIPEG (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Rene Toupin has introduced a bill in the Manitoba legislature providing further extensions of the rentalsman services to landlords and tenants and greater equalization of benefits to both parties. The bill proposed amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act and would assist landlords in dealing with tenants who are habitually delinquent in rent payments; in preparation of applications for orders of possession of premises; and in gaining access to premises to show them to new renters or buyers.

Berlin Talks Set

LONDON (Reuter) — United States, British, French and West German leaders will hold a meeting in London on May 9 to discuss the Berlin and German problem, British officials said Monday. They will meet after attending a two-day economic summit conference here of seven leading non-Communist industrial countries which ends May 8.

New Laws on Bingo

EDMONTON (CP) — With Albertans spending $25 million last year on bingo games, the government is drafting new regulations and conditions under which such games may be operated, Attorney-General Jim Foster told the legislature Monday.

He said bingos serve a need in communities providing funds for worthwhile ventures, but they "are not small operations" and the government finds current regulations should be revised."

New Ferry Route Set, Says Davis

Transport Minister Jack Davies said Monday one major new ferry route supplemented by feeder services to smaller communities will be the basis of the new B.C. Ferries service to the north and mid-coast.

Davis said he wanted to reassure residents of the areas that the government is planning services to all communities, not just those with major ferry docks, and also that the ferries will be used for some freight services, such as transporting perishable food.

He said he fears residents are developing unnecessary worries, based on misunderstanding about the government's plans for the service.

Director's of the B.C. Ferries Corp. met today to work out details of the new service and to decide on rate reductions on some ferry runs, reductions already promised by Premier Bill Bennett.

Funds for the rate reductions and the costs of the new service will come from an $8-million federal subsidy. In return, B.C. agreed to take responsibility for ferry services to northern and mid-coast communities.

Davis said the new major ferry route will probably run from Tsawwassen, south of Vancouver to Prince Rupert or Kitimat.

It will use a large ferry, probably one currently in the ferries fleet and will stop only at ports with suitable docks — Kelsey Bay and Ocean Falls at the moment.

Davis said he hopes a stop at Bella Bella will be added almost immediately and one at Port Hardy by the time the northern Vancouver Island highway to that town is completed.

The major ferry will carry passengers and the same sort of freight that now is carried on other B.C. ferries, he said. That freight must be driven directly on and off the ferry and must not require loading or unloading with cranes or similar equipment.

Davis said the government does not plan to use the new service to carry freight in the same way Northland Navigation carried it. (Northland received a $3.1 million federal subsidy for aupplying transport services to the area until 1976).

Davis said Northland carried goods such as tons of newsprint and for the government to subsidize that sort of service would be to subsidize exports and big corporations.

The most innovative part of the new service will be the feeder services, he said. These will be small ferries able to dock alongside floats or on beaches to serve communities that do not have good docking facilities.

He said service to the Queen Charlotte Islands is the biggest problem right now and is still being considered.

The government hopes to receive more federal funding to help in dock construction, he said.

Meanwhile, Ken Stratford, ferries traffic manager, said improved service for Sunshine Coast communities northwest of Vancouver will begin in late May.

He said the new triangle runs will be serviced primarily by new ferry Queen of New Westminster, which replaces two vessels previously serving the area. The Queen of Nanaimo and the Queen of Burnaby will provide support service as required.

Stratford said that the new service is designed to provide improved service during summer months.

FUMES FOIL OIL CAP BID

STAVANGER, Norway (UPI) — U.S. troubleshooters boarded an offshore platform in the North Sea today to try to cap a runaway well gushing 4,000 tons of oil a day, but leaking gas fumes forced them to leave the rig.

Angsar (Boots) Hansen and Richard Hatterberg of the Red Adair Fires and Blowout Co. of Houston arrived on the rig at 7 a.m. as 45-mile-an-hour winds and high seas abated but within hours, the leaking gas forced evacuation.

AIB Cracks Down On Overpayments

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Anti-Inflation Board is adopting a firmer stand on recovery of salary increases paid in excess of the guidelines without the board's approval.

Employers who have been notified to recover excess payments will be required to submit a recovery plan to the board within 30 days of such notification.

Where employers do not submit an acceptable recovery plan within the established time limits the board will refer the case to the administrator for appropriate action. He can impose fines or jail terms or both.

The board will take the same step where in the opinion of the board significant recovery action has not taken place.

Under the AIB rules increases in compensation above arithmetic guidelines may be accepted by the board where "special consideration" applies.

The board, a year ago, cautioned employers that in cases of wage agreements exceeding the guidelines they should make interim compensation payments only to the extent permissible under the guidelines until a formal decision had been issued by tre AIB.

The Canadian Labor Congress, meanwhile, is confident that federal wage and price controls will be lifted within "one or two months," CLC vice-president Julien Major said Monday.

Visiting Quebec City to attend a convention of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers, Major told a reporter the two-million-member CLC received assurances at a meeting with government and business representatives in Ottawa last Friday the controls would come off soon.

He did not elaborate on the mature of the assurances, but said the labor congress has reached general agreement with big business on the nature of the post-controls economy.

Tipplers Plug B.C. Courts

An elaborate computer system used by British Columbia attorney-general's department has persuaded government officials to step up advertising aimed at drinking drivers.

Justice Information Systems came up with the statistic that a whopping 40 per cent of all B.C. criminal court cases involve impaired driving charges.

Deputy attorney-general Dave Vickers is ebullient about the system, calling it "the most important management and budget tool we've got."

Apart from the drinking-driver percentage, the system is proving a tremendous aid in an overhaul of B.C.'s entire court setup and has prompted a move toward dropping most unresolved summary conviction charges after 180 days.

Vickers is intrigued by the system's ability to show the nature of crime — "what crimes are being committed in what percentages in what communities."

"What you have for the first time is a co-ordinated justice system," he said. "This elaborate management information system will make justice procedure more effective and, let's face it, less costly. To put money in the front end in prevention is a lot cheaper than putting it in the back end."

Ottawa Reins In Crown Agencies

Times News Sehvices

OTTAWA — Treasury Board President Robert Andras announced Monday two major steps to restore control over government spending.

He announced that a chief financial officer, a comptroller general of Canada, will be appointed and that the government will impose new restraint on the financial freedoc of Crown corporations.

The announcement was a response to Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell, who complained in his last annual report that: "Financial management and control of the majority of Crown corporations is virtually non-existent . . . and Parliament has lost or is losing effective control of the public purse."

Andras noted that creation of the comptroller-general position meets the principal recommendation of the auditor-general's 1976 annual report.

He said the comptroller-general would have deputy minister status and would report directly to the president of the Treasury Board.

In general terms, he would be responsible for the quality and integrity of the financial administrative responsibilities and practices in use throughout the federal public service.

The government will also reduce the financial independence of Crown corporations, Andras said.

The government was serious about correcting abuses in its financial administration system, Andras said.

The moves were hailed by opposition spokesmen, although Conservative treasury board critic, Don Mazankowski, said he detected suggestions of inroads on the auditor-general's powers.

The proposed legislation will give the auditor-general the authority to say whether the government is getting value for its money, Andras said.

MAPLE BAY HOTEL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Overnight fires destroyed the Maple Bay Inn near Duncan, and Betty's Store, 14 miles south of Campbell River.

Occupants of the hotel got out safely but a fireman cut his wrist and had to be taken to hospital for treatment.

Both fires are under investigation and no estimates of damage have been released.

The fire in the Maple Bay Inn was spotted at 1:53 a.m. and within minutes the old building, a local landmark, was engulfed in flames.

Duncan RCMP said there were six persons living in the Inn at the time, owners Bert and Diane Hough, and tenants Brian Parker and Bill and Catherine Reed and their son Derek.

All escaped without injury.

The fire at Betty's Store, near Oyster River, broke out at 11 p.m. and swiftly consumed the store and a small trailer parked nearby.

The Campbell River fire department sent men and equipment even though the fire was outside their fire district.

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

About 800 people now employed by the ministry of public works will be looking for new jobs in the public service before the B.C. Building Corp. is set up early next year.

Highways and Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said today about 1,200 public works employees will be transferred to the newly-created crown corporation, but about 800 employees, from "janitors to architects" will not be absorbed by the corporation.

None of the 800 will be laid off, Fraser said, and attempts will be made to retrain and relocate them in other government ministries.

The minister said the greater efficiency expected of the corporation is the reason for the excess employees. Some of the jobs now done by those civil servants will be performed by the private sector when the corporation is set up.

The BCBC was established by legislation passed in June, 1976, but Fraser said he does not expect it to be in operation until January, 1978, at the earliest.

The retraining of the 800 employees for other positions will start shortly, Fraser said, although he added the 800 have not yet been told their jobs are being eliminated.

The corporation, which will be headquartered in Victoria, will manage all government space requirements, about 17 million square feet of space — except for the legislative buildings, Government House and several small operations.

A joint union-management committee will be set up to oversee the transition and transfer of public works employees, Fraser said.

DUTCH BUSINESSMAN GOT POLYSAR $3M—CBC

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC says it has learned that a wealthy Amsterdam businessman received $3 million of the almost $5 million in kickbacks paid by Polysar International, an agency controlled by the federal government.

The money was paid between 1970 and 1976, the CBC says.

It says the person who received the money is the man behind a company which bought latex from Polysar to make foam-rubber carpet backing.

His purchases were so large that he was offered a volume rebate and following his instructions, Polysar made the payments to a Swiss bank, the CBC says.

It says the man denies he was the customer involved and that he says the company never dealt with Polysar. A variety of sources, however, confirm that the man was a major Polysar customer, the CBC says.

Hockey Answers Demanded by MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Hockey Canada bosses Alan Eagleson and Doug Fisher should be called on to explain Team Canada 77s embarrassing performance at the World Cup, Northern Ontario MP Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) said in the Commons Monday.

Peters introduced a motion saying a Commons committee should be told why the country sent "second-rate players instead of the best of the NHL" to the World Cup.

Canada was trounced 11-1 by the Soviet Union Sunday. It lost to Sweden and barely defeated the United States.

Eagleson, a Toronto lawyer, is the head of Team Canada while Fisher, an Ottawa political columnist, is the chairman of Hockey Canada, the federally-funded agency that looks after international hockey relations.

Peters' motion did not receive the unanimous consent required for it to come to a vote.

Later, he asked whether the government had plans to train a team specifically for international competition. Industry Minister Jean Chretien, acting prime minister, said he knew of no such program.

The prime minister's office said Trudeau was ill and worked at home Monday.

Chretien suggested in the Commons exchange that if the World Cup tournament were held in the autumn rather than during the Stanley Cup playoffs in the spring, Canada would have better players competing in Europe.

But Peters was not impressed.

"We take what's left over and send them over to Europe without having any training together as a team," he said outside the Commons. "It's unfair to the players and unfair to Canadians."

"We don't have to win, but we do have to learn to lose more gracefully than we do now," he said.

"We have to teach them some sportsmanship, which sometimes is sadly lacking in the National Hockey League."

New Motor Hailed as 'Billion-Dollar Breakthrough'

By BILL RICHARDS
Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Working out of a backyard laboratory a California inventor has developed a new design for the standard electric motor that officials here Monday said could save massive amounts of energy.

In an unusual joint news conference, California energy officials and officials of the Southern California Edison Co., the fourth largest U.S. utility, hailed the motor design as "a major billion-dollar breakthrough for energy conservation."

The invention, called a "controlled torque motor," reduces electrical consumption by as much as 20 per cent while producing the same power output as conventional electric motors, according to its developer C. L. Wanlass.

Noting that about 64 per cent of U.S. electricity goes to run electric motors, Wanlass said his new design could "make a significant impact in energy consumption in a relatively short time."

The new motor design could be used to replace anything from a tiny motor in an electric shaver to a massive industrial motor, officials said. One utility official calculated that, if the device became widely used among just residential electricity consumers alone in the Southern California Edison system, it would save about one billion kilowatt hours of electricity in a decade, or enough power to run a city of 300,000 people for a year.

The officials said electricity savings would be considerably greater.

According to Wanlass, if a half billion electric motors were converted to his design, the U.S. could save between one and two million barrels of oil a day, or roughly the daily production expected from the whole Prudhoe Bay Alaskan oil field.

Modification of existing electric motors could be modified for about $40 for a one-horsepower motor while the design could be incorporated in new motors without increasing current production costs, Wanlass said.

Wanlass, 51, was formerly director of the Philco Corp.'s electronic research laboratories and holds a patent on about 40 inventions, most of them in the computer field. He said he developed the controlled torque motor design in a laboratory in the backyard of his Santa Ana, Calif., home after leaving Philco in 1965.

Southern California Edison officials said they tested the device after Wanlass came to them last year. Under laboratory conditions the new design saved up to 20 per cent of the electricity needed to run an ordinary motor, utility officials said. Larger energy savings could be anticipated in motors used under normal work conditions the officials said.

Addiction Attack 'All Wrong'

FISHER

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Dr. Mark Fisher has the feeling he's a lone voice calling out in the wilderness.

The reason: He advocates free heroin for hardened addicts.

Not only that, he proposes much stiffer penalties — even the death penalty — for pushers.

The two measures have to go hand in hand, he says. One isn't good enough.

He is a general practitioner who has to deal with addicts as patients.

He is a Victoria school board trustee who has to deal with the drug problem in schools.

And most significantly he is the medical consultant at Victoria's methadone clinic, a position he's held since July, 1973.

★

Fisher says he can see certain values in the methadone program as a means of helping addicts break away from the criminal drug culture.

But the approach is "all wrong."

"The problem is heroin, not methadone," he says. "If you're going to deal with heroin you might as well deal with the same drug model instead of substituting a socially acceptable drug.

"Why does society consider methadone more acceptable than heroin when, in fact, it is just as addicting if not more so, and just as much of a problem as far as psychological withdrawal is concerned?

Fisher questions the success of the methadone program.

It has been estimated only about 5 per cent of all addicts avail themselves of the free treatment.

Only about 30 addicts are making the daily trip to the clinic in Vic West for their three-ounce shot of methadone mixed with Tang. Six months ago there were 45.

He contends addicts want heroin, vastly prefer it over methadone, and that if the drug was given under close medical supervision, addicts would no longer be able to cite their habit as an excuse for their criminal acts.

"As soon as you invalidate all the excuses, then at least you've got a handle on the problem," he says.

But heroin maintenance would not be successful, he says, without a more concerted effort to stop the pushers.

"I think society needs to reevaluate its punitive measures," he says. "It may be less civilized but I believe the death penalty for pushers is the price we will have to pay."

Fisher says the onus is on the politicians and those in the medical profession to come up with a solution.

Both the provincial health minister, Bob McClelland and the federal health minister, Marc Lalonde, are as adamantly opposed to heroin maintenance as the federal government is to reinstituting the death penalty.

"It's rather like saying I'm against motherhood and apple pie," says Fisher, "but attitudes can and do change. Who knows but maybe we'll all be against motherhood in 50 years when the world is totally over-populated."

Fisher believes the medical profession should be doing more because addiction, after all, is an illness. But little is done, he says.

"Most doctors prefer not to have anything to do with heroin addiction. The addict tends to be a pain as far as every day care. It's easier to give him a prescription and get him out of your hair than it is for him to create a scene. I know. I've had it here. I've had to throw addicts out."

Fisher says the heroin problem hasn't reached the point yet where society is prepared to say "Hey, look, let's do something about it."

★

He's convinced if anybody really made a specific impact on the drug culture that person would have the underworld on his doorstep ready to either eliminate him or buy him off.

"If Mr. McClelland took a stronger stand then I truly believe his life would be in danger," Fisher says.

Inevitable Result

For most heroin addicts, the road leads to prison as they turn to a life of crime to support their expensive habit. Dr. Mark Fisher, consultant at Victoria's methadone clinic, thinks society's approach to the problem is all wrong.

The juvenile had his story all ready.

He didn't have anything to do with the stolen vehicle he told police, he was simply hitch-hiking home from a party in Saanichton and the other guy (who had by this time scampered into the bush) had given him a ride.

The youth's mother was brought to the Saanich police station, and the interview continued, but he stuck to his story. Finally the mother suggested going to the "party house" to verify the story.

After much driving around the youth pointed to a house and told Constable Doug Oakley that's where the party was.

"Are you sure?" asked Oakley.

"Positive," came the reply.

"Impossible," said Oakley. "A policeman lives there and he's on duty."

The youth suggested the policeman had children who held the party without the parents knowing about it.

"The policeman doesn't have children," Oakley replied.

"How do you know?" the youth inquired.

"Because it's my house," Oakley said.

"The story began to unfold a little more accurately after that," Chief Bob Peterson said. The other boy was arrested a short while later.

Both will appear in family court this week to face auto theft charges.

Ex-Addict Suspended

A 23-year-old woman was put on probation for two years in county court today for possession of stolen property.

Judge Peter Millward found Lorna Price, of 407 William, guilty March 8 of possession of a guitar valued at more than $200, knowing it to have been stolen.

Defence counsel Darrel Woods said most of the previous offences involving the accused, mainly theft and false pretences, were committed to support her heroin drug habit between April, 1972, and June, 1974.

He said Price, also known as Lorna Lesher and Lorna McDannold, was short of money at the time of the offence last November, and was trying to support a three-year-old daughter and stay on the methadone drug withdrawal program.

"It seems you are making some effort to rehabilitate yourself," Millward said. "The effort seems largely unBut it may be that the prinsuccessful up to this point. cipal factor in your lengthy criminal behavior is due to the drug problem."

Judge Millward noted previous short sentences had been of little help and felt another period of confinement would have little effect.

He suspended sentence, "accepting the most charitable view, that there was no criminal intent behind the offences," on condition the accused follow prescribed medical treatment, abstain from drugs except those prescribed, and submit to any drug test requested by police.

18-Month Perjury Sentence

A murder trial witness who denied helping to move the victim's body was sentenced today to 18 months in jail for perjury.

Russell Benjamin Mutter, 22, was charged after giving evidence in the trial of David John Ross, convicted of murder punishable by life imprisonment for the shooting of Malcolm Preston Cunningham, Nov. 1, 1975.

The Crown alleged Mutter helped Ross to move the body after the two and another man drove to the murder scene later that day.

County court Judge M. L. T. Drake said he believed the testimony of witness Rodney Steigenburger, who said Ross and Mutter did move the body.

Crown counsel Armand Petronio asked for a penitentiary sentence, or a minimum two years, which would have meant he would serve his sentence with Ross.

Citizens Force Rezoning Delay

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A stormy public hearing Monday forced Saanich council to postpone a decision on rezoning 80 acres in the North Quadra area from rural to single-family homes.

One the suggestion of Ald. John Mika, the decision will not be made until the community plan for that area has been aired at a public meeting, scheduled in May.

Mondays hearing was accompanied by charges of mistrust of council, jeers and catcalls at Mayor Ed Lum and some aldermen.

Residents made it clear they did not trust council's move to rezone to single-family homes, believing this was "the thin edge of the wedge leading to townhouse development. Only seven persons spoke in favor of the rezoning.

. . . knocks committee

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said the strong opposition was unprecedented, adding it is "very significant' that only two of the speakers are now farming land in the area—one of the few remaining prime undeveloped areas in Saanich.s At one point Lum threatened to adjourn the hearing unless order was restored.

H. W. Thompson of Lily Avenue said he opposed the rezoning "because I don't trust council," and Harry Young of Quadra Street opposed it because he said one of the roads proposed would run right through his duck pond and living room.

W. G. Moore of Dieppe Road said real estate board figures showed 1,940 homes listed for sale in Greater Victoria. This, he said, did not include private sales or exclusive listings of sales by builders.

"People who have their own homes are denying others the right to a home," accused Ald. Sandy Noel, adding it is vital the land be rezoned so sewers can be installed.

He criticized the lands, planning and housing committee for "dereliction of duty" in not discussing "an excellent letter" on the North Quadra area sent to council by a Saanich resident.

Several residents told council they would not oppose the rezoning if they were given assurance that no townhouses would be allowed. Aldermen said no council could give such a guarantee.

$4,101 Back To Developer

The Greater Victoria school board Monday agreed it has a moral responsibility to return a $4,101 overpayment by developer Hans Hartwig in his 1976 tax assessment for school purposes.

Two of Hartwig's Diversified Holdings Ltd. properties were accidently over assessed but Hartwig's appeal to the Court of Appeals last year was too late.

Trustees re-adjusted the 1977 taxation rate by a fraction of a mill and will send Hartwig a cheque as soon as the money has been collected.

Trustee Daphne Temple questioned why the district is being asked to reimburse him when according to a report, Hartwig is on an extended holiday and was not concerned about the assessment when he received it early in 1976.

Hal Knight suggested Hartwig was "rather delinquent" in waiting too long to appeal the over-assessment, but neither trustee voted against paying the money back after Peter Dorazio pointed out even though the district has no legal obligation to make payment, Hartwig overpaid because of an error.

The city of Victoria has agreed to pay back its share of the overpayment if it receives permission from the provincial government.

Door-to-Door Sellers Shine Their Image

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Have you been bothered by a high-pressure salesman who refuses to take "not interested" for an answer and persists with foot-in-door persistence to push his product?

Or have you recently bought a product from a door-to-door salesman which you realize, after the dust has settled, you don't want or don't know too much about?

If you have, then the Better Business Bureau in Victoria has your interests at heart.

The bureau has set up a special committee of representatives from direct selling companies who are BBB members to promote public confidence in such sales and self-regulation of sales staff and techniques.

Larry Scott, chairman of the bureau's new committee, said in an interview Monday people are wary of door-to-door salesmen.

"There is an automatic resistance to direct selling people and in many cases that is justified because of past experiences," he said.

He said many unscrupulous salesmen work on people's fears or personal inadequacies to sell their products.

Those direct selling companies which belong to the bureau have decided to try and polish their image and eliminate the shysters.

Direct sales refers to any form of personal selling by which a product is offered directly to the consumer at home.

The 11 direct selling companies which make up the committee have adopted the following policies:

—to promote self-regulation among direct selling companies through regular information meetings;

—to improve the quality and character of direct selling companies and sales men and women using established standards of practice of the BBB for the people of Greater Victoria;

—to educate and inform the public in the interests of better direct selling through regular publications.

The committee members have also adopted rules of conduct related to integrity, respect for the consumer's privacy and responsibility for the sales practices of their sales staff.

Scott sees this effort to clean up the reputation of the door-to-door salesman as a means of dampening inflation.

The companies involved are in the sales business and the more they sell the more they can afford to keep their prices down, he says.

He says the program will also fight unemployment because the more business the companies do the more people they can afford to employ.

Eventually, Scott says, the salesmen from the companies which belong to the Better Business Bureau will be given a decal, indicating their membership, which they will display when approaching a consumer.

The direct selling companies who are members of the bureau are, the Canadian Family Record Plan, Electrolux, J K Industries, J A N Distributors, Techram Industries, Best-O-Milk Products, Vita-Luv, Victoria Diner Service, Encyclopedia Britannica, Island Security Patrol Ltd., and Amway.

Greedy Fat Boy Nod 69

Billy was born in a penny boys' paper called The Magnet in March, 1908, and has appeared in one form or another, in books and on television and radio, ever since.

He remains a greedy and untruthful 15-year-old, personifying many of the worst characteristics of the human race. He is a backward student in a class called the Remove or Lower Fourth, under the steely blue eye of Horatio Quelch, MA.

Quelch's study now contains a television set as well as the stout cane he continues to apply to the posteriors of offending schoolboys

The inhabitants of Greyfriars were the brain-children of a scholarly gentleman named Frank Richards, who hammered out Bunter stories until he died at the age of 92 in Kingsgate, Kent. Nine years ago, the Remove was removed to the Howard Baker Press, located in a stately double-fronted house near the famed Wimbledon tennis courts.

Baker, a lively 51-year-old Anglo-Irishman, has been cashing in on the nostalgia of generations of Bunter fans around the world by having the original stories litho-6graphed, but between hard covers and published as single volumes containing some six issues.

At three guineas ($9) a copy, the books are out of the price range of most contemporary schoolboys but a lively market has sprung up among middle-aged and elderly readers who had been deprived of the Greyfriars chronicles since Magnet and its sister publications, Gem and Popular, were wiped out by rationing in the Second World War.

Whether younger audiences will become attuned to Bunter's anguished cries of "Yaroogh" as retribution descends on him remains to be seen but Baker, pointing proudly to a large colored map of Bunterland on his office wall, expressed confidence that the fat schoolboy's immortality is assured.

Japan Sticks with Swords

Washington Post

TOKURA, Japan—The two apprentices grunted and swung with swift, rhythmic grace. Sparks cascaded over the squatting, immobile figure of their master. The chunk of white-hot metal at his feet sang and yielded under the pounding sledgehammers and gradually became a sword.

The music of the hammer on swordsmith Yuhihiro Miyairi's anvil is a timeless sound and a defiant reassertion of 1,000 years and more of Japanese martial tradition. Since 1588, some strong-willed leaders—including shoguns, emperors and Gen. Douglas MacArthur—have tried to separate the Japanese from their swords and to prevent people like Miyairi from making more. To be brief, they failed.

Except for a few criminal gangs who still maintain internal discipline with the deadly, curved blades, swords are no longer used as weapons. As treasured possessions, however, revered for magnificent workmanship and the links with the samurai spirit of Japan's violent past, they are coming back fast.

After the Second World War, MacArthur, as supreme commander for the allied powers, ordered the Japanese to turn in their swords. They were felt to be a symbol of barbarous militarism. Three million blades were surrendered and destroyed, but many otherwise obedient Japanese balked at the idea and cached prized swords away until they became legal again in 1953. One and a half million are now registered in private ownership.

Swords are back in the shops, and selling well. They shimmer in department stores and draw crowds at exhibitions. Valuable antique swords appeared on the catalog of a Tokyo art auction last month for the first time in more than 30 years. The government has presented swords to Arab leaders and recently it reopened the foundry that for centuries supplied a steel of legendary strength. Three tons a year will go to the 30 craftsmen who make swords full-time and the 180 parttimers who are gradually dropping the sideline production of cutlery. A good steak knife may be more useful, but a weapon capable of lopping one or several men in half engages everyone's attention.

Collectors are doctors, landowners and company presidents who can afford the cost of one of the swords. A $3,000 to $4,000 price tag is common and a sword with a history is worth far more. A blade used in a famous Harakiri (ritual suicide) or some heroic battle can fetch $50,000. In the classy Ginza store where Mitsuo Shibata equips the carriage trade with expensive blades, he unsheathed an engraved sword with the shiny but faintly uncared-for look of something lost in the attic for 30 years. It was 800 years old, made in the Kamakura golden age of swordmaking, and worth $20,000 he said.

"This is a sword restoration," said Shibata, "The Japanese are very eager to buy swords. Business is good."

Nourished by fighting Samurai dramas on television and Kabuki plays, the sword mystique in Japan equates to gun fascination in America. Sensitive to the sword's symbolism for Japanese militarism in the 1930s and 1940s, experts play down the thrills of "cold steel" and stress artistic and spiritual values.

"After the gun, the sword became old-fashioned," said swordsmith Miyairi. "We never use them to kill people now, but they have their own life. People love swords."

Rising from the beaten earth of his smithy in this quiet mountain town, he added: "They are very beautiful, they appeal to the spirit of the Japanese."

Miyairi's life centres on an exacting craft that enlists ancient techniques and spiritual support in the search for perfection. "This is a holy place," he says, "because this task is above human power alone."

Miyairi is a squat man with balding hair shorn close to the skull. He wears traditional white work robes that expose stoutly muscled forearms covered with scars from years of melding "fire, steel and water" and the forge. Except for spectacles that focus glittering, gimlet eyes — he is the ageless artisan personified—easily taken for any of his sword-making predecessors over the last 1,300 years.

As one of two contemporary swordsmiths so skilled that the government has judged them living national treasures, Miyairi is the best of his generation. The competition is with the past. He struggles endlessly to match the swords of master craftsmen long dead. He can recognize at a glance the work of 100 or so leading swordsmiths since the 10th century, and he knows their standards.

In a mass-production world, Miyairi is still determined to forge swords "which will survive forever." A dour man, he is attended by six grimy apprentices he defines as "young men who eat for nothing." He directs them by grunts.

Laboring together in silent absorption, they follow the ancient formulas to toughen the steel and temper the blade. It takes a month, four kinds of steel and infinite care to make a sword that has the proper blend of strength and flexibility. Color, shape, balance and edge must be just so before Miyairi sends it off into posterity with his name on the hilt.

The steel is continually broken, beaten and heated to eliminate weaknesses. Science alone does not explain it, Miyairi admits, but the 1,000-year-old iron nails he salvaged from a Nara temple have special qualities.

He is equally fastidious about everything else. Water must be soft and the climate neither too hot nor too cold. Rain is bad. Two months a year, Miyairi and his apprentices go into the mountains to make chestnut-wood charcoal for the necessary high temperatures and even heat.

OPEN CAMPUS KEY TO SUCCESS

FARIBAULT, Minn. (AP) — On an unfenced campus where openness is seen as a key to success, 40 doctors, therapists and teachers are trying to rid 30 adolescents of their emotional problems at an annual cost of about $46,350 a patient.

The pupil-patients say the treatment and one-to-one teaching at the Constance Bultman Wilson Centre for Education and Psychiatry is effective.

"I was suicidal and would have been dead in five years," said a 17-year-old girl.

"Before I came here I had problems with the law and was sent to a state institution," said a teen-aged boy. "Now I'm in touch with my feelings and acceptance has become important. I've been taught to help myself."

The centre, founded in 1971 by Dr. Robert Wilson, combines three institutions: a psychiatric hospital, a school and a college branch which trains psychiatrists. Wilson, 44, says there is no institution in the world like it.

Patients aged 14 to 22 undergo psychoanalysis, psychiatry and teaching and generally stay one or two years, long enough to get used to being well.

Patients range from the psychotic to the withdrawn, from the violence-prone to the academically underachieving.

Each patient has his own therapist, co-therapist, recreational assistant and teacher. At individual psychotherapy sessions four times a week, the patient is encouraged to express feelings. Two or three times a week, he is in group therapy. At high-school and college-level classes, the students are encouraged to call teachers by their first name.

The centre charges $115 a day, excluding school. It is paid by the family or insurance companies or, in some cases, by welfare or other government agencies.

Before opening the centre, Wilson practised adolescent psychiatry at the Mayo Clinic in nearby Rochester. But he saw the need for a live-in, long-term centre.

The road wasn't easy. In 1973, staff cuts were avoided only when the staff voted itself a 10-per-cent pay cut. In 1975, on surer footing, the centre bought a 106-acre campus and four buildings.

Oil-Rich Iran Finds It Has Uranium, Too

TEHRAN, Iran — Besides its vast oil wealth, Iran has reserves of another key energy source destined to become increasingly valuable in the future: uranium.

Iranian and Western nuclear energy experts confirm the existence of the reserves in Iran, but say their size and whether they can be commercially exploited at current uranium prices remain to be determined.

"They look promising, there's no doubt about that," an Iranian official said of the uranium anomalies discovered so far. Anomalies are indications of mineral content in rock based on magnetic readings. According to officials, some of the geological formations in which the anomalies have been found are similar to the richest in the United States.

(The United States has the world's largest known reserves of uranium, estimated at 277,000 short tons of U308, according to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.)

To ascertain the size and quality of its reserves, Iran is launching one of the most ambitious uranium exploration programs ever undertaken, Iranian officials said. The government has budgeted $300 million for the program over the next 10 years and the first phase — three years of "airborne prospecting" — is due to start by early May, they said.

Iran, the second largest oil producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, wants to be a supplier of uranium to fuel nuclear power stations after its oil runs out in about 20 years.

As an energy exporter, "our policy and our ambiton is to sit on the same side of the table as we are sitting right now," said Ghassem Arabyan, head of the uranium exploration division in the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran.

To achieve this goal, Iran is seeking joint ventures in foreign countries and is negotiating such agreements with Niger, Gabon and Zambia, Arabyan said. No foreign participation will be allowed in domestic uranium ventures, however.

As part of a plan to stockpile uranium until its own production gets well under way, Iran has already purchased 30,000 tons of uranium from foreign sources, with deliveries starting this year and lasting until 1994. Iranian officials are keeping any projections of domestic uranium production close to the vest, but a paper presented at a nuclear technology conference in Iran this month, cited agreements to purchase 30,000 tons of uranium concentrates from the 40,000 tons required up to 1990 — implying that Iran expects to produce 10,000 tons itself. Western officials said this was a conservative estimate.

Iran plans to install about 20 nuclear power stations to generate some 23,000 megawatts of electricity by the early 1990s. Two stations have been ordered from West Germany and two more are being negotiated with France.

The air surveys will be carried out by three firms — Australian, West German and French — under contract to the Atomic Energy Organization. The surveys will concentrate on a hilly strip of land along Iran's eastern border and the Azerbaijan area in the northwest, officials said.

LIBERATION PAINS WOMEN

MONTREAL (CP) — A New York psychiatrist says women are emotionally unable to cope with their new lives brought about by the women's liberation movement.

"Women are going through the pain of liberation," said Dr. Alexandra Symonds, who teaches at the New York University College of Medicine, the American Institute of Psychoanalysis and the New School for Social RSJB.

"A woman's career has become part of her sense of identity, something which was previously restricted to men."

Until recently, women only worked out of necessity, not out of a desire for self-fulfilment, Dr. Symonds said.

"But they are in terrible conflict because they can't cope with the aggressive and competitive situations which men take for granted."

Dr. Symonds said that in a work situation, women often resort to childish behavior such as crying when criticized. Women had been encouraged all their lives to express dependent needs and had been discouraged from being independent.

As career women become more competent and recognized in their work, they start to fear they will lose their femininity, Dr. Symonds said.

"Often, women who are at the highest point of their careers give it up. They are in terror of feeling masculine and fly into a panic at the suggestion that they have masculine characteristics."

The doctor said women still try to please the men in their lives and they "have got to learn to be less submissive and self-effacing."

Water Crisis Hits Calgary

Times News Services

CALGARY — Water works officials were battling to keep water taps flowing after hot, dry weather during the weekend almost brought the city to the brink of a major water crisis Sunday night and Monday morning.

G. H. Johnston, water works manager, said in an interview that record April consumption of 140-million gallons of water Saturday, 146-million gallons Sunday and about 100-million gallons Monday left reservoirs only 50 per cent full.

Temperatures the last three days have been near 28 degrees celcus and today's forecast calls for more hot, dry weather.

Johnston, who supervised the complicated distribution of available water from underground reservoirs during the weekend, said the water reserves were expected to be back to full capacity this morning.

He said the 140-million-plus gallons of water consumed on two successive days compares with an April water consumption high of 114-million gallons in 1976 and 70-million gallons in 1975.

The Saskatchewan government, meanwhile, is prepared to offer assistance in finding alternative water supplies to communities hit by the current drought, Environment Minister Neil Byers said Monday in Regina.

Responding to Neil McMallan during question period, Byers reiterated his assurance that the government was prepared to help communities which run low on water. He said the Saskatchewan research council had developed an inventory of water supplies so communities would know where to look for alternative sources. As well, the department of agriculture has pumping and piping equipment ready for individual farmers and communities who want to bring in water from other sources.

Alta. Cool To Ginter Share Plan

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government Monday ended weeks of speculation when it announced its rent controls will be continued on a modified basis for the next three years, adding a warning to landlords.

Graham Harle, consumer and corporate affairs minister, told the legislature the controls, imposed 18 months ago and due to expire June 30, will be extended to June 30, 1980, basically aimed at protecting residents of less expensive accommodation from rapid rent escalations.

Harle warned landlords that any rent increases at the time of decontrol "of the magnitude experienced recently can only result in the government . . . reassessing its position."

CRASH FATAL TO 67 HOGS

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Sixty-seven hogs were killed and a man seriously injured Monday night in a semi-trailer-car accident on Highway 1 near here.

BID TO KEEP TRADE POST

EDMONTON (CP) — The trading post from which Simon Fraser set out to explore British Columbia should not be destroyed by a hydro-electric project, the Alberta legislature was told Monday.

Culture Minister Horst Schmid tabled a report by John Hicks which recommended that the land immediately around old Fort Dunvegan in northwestern Alberta should be protected by being designated as an historic site.

Although it was suggested a concrete dam upstream from the town would be acceptable, an earth dam closer to the community was ruled out.

EDMONTON (CP) — A British Columbia brewery owner's plan to allow beer drinkers to trade bottle caps for shares may not be permitted in Alberta.

K. E. Baker, deputy chairman of the Alberta Liquir Control Board, said Monday "the plan doesn't apply here . . . because we've never heard of it. It's news to us."

Baker said Ben Ginter's scheme is likely ill-fated because "I doubt the liquor board would approve it. I don't think it would be legal."

Ginter has offered 10 shares in his company to anyone turning 200 of his Uncle Ben's bottle tops back to the company. Ginter's main B.C. company, Uncle Ben's Industries, has been in receivership since January, 1976, and Ginter has been exploring various ways of raising additional financing.

Lougheed to Visit Russia, Mid-East

EDMONTON (CP)—Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta announced today he will visit the Soviet Union and Middle East countries in June. Lougheed said the five-week trip is not a trade mission, but a fact-finding tour that has the blessing of the federal department of external affairs.

Pensions Assured

REGINA (CP)—The Saskaskatchewan government moved Monday to protect employees who change jobs after joining the civil service and lose their pension benefits as a result. Those who join the government service in future will, after three years on the-job, have their pensions locked-in. In the event they leave the government for another job, their pension contributions and the government's matching contribution will stay in a fund to accumulate interest and provide a pension in later years.

Service Extended

WINNIPEG (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Rene Toupin has introduced a bill in the Manitoba legislature providing further extensions of the rentalsman services to landlords and tenants and greater equalization of benefits to both parties. The bill proposed amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act and would assist landlords in dealing with tenants who are habitually delinquent in rent payments; in preparation of applications for orders of possession of premises; and in gaining access to premises to show them to new renters or buyers.

Berlin Talks Set

LONDON (Reuter) — United States, British, French and West German leaders will hold a meeting in London on May 9 to discuss the Berlin and German problem, British officials said Monday. They will meet after attending a two-day economic summit conference here of seven leading non-Communist industrial countries which ends May 8.

New Laws on Bingo

EDMONTON (CP) — With Albertans spending $25 million last year on bingo games, the government is drafting new regulations and conditions under which such games may be operated. Attorney-General Jim Foster told the legislature Monday.

He said bingos serve a need in communities providing funds for worthwhile ventures, but they "are not small operations" and the government finds current regulations should be revised."
